Glass, Byrd Halt Roberts Approval as U.S. Judge

Virginians Declare Roosevelt Nominee 'Personally Offensive And Obnoxious'

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday, by an overwhelming 15-to-3 vote, sent to the Senate with an adverse report the appointment of Floyd H. Roberts, corporation judge of Bristol, Va., for Federal judge of the western Virginia judicial district.

This action was taken in closed meeting, lasting hardly more than five minutes, after Virginia's veteran Senator, Carter Glass, had charged that the Roberts appointment was President Roosevelt's answer to a letter from him asking whether Gov. James H. Price had been made boss of Federal patronage in the State.

"Personally Offensive"

Senators Glass and Byrd, Virginia, both Democrats, declared in an open hearing by the committee that selection of the Bristol judge was "personally offensive and obnoxious" to them.

The small, stuffy Judiciary Committee meeting room was packed with Virginians, most of them supporters of Roberts, during the hearing.

Gov. Price and former Govs. E. Lee Trinkle and Westmoreland Davis testified in behalf of Roberts. The latter appeared in his own behalf.

Senator Glass Speaks

The dramatic moment came when Glass, 81-year-old veteran, who had suggested that Price and other supporters of the appointment testify first, addressed the committee in opposition.

He wrote to Roosevelt, he said, after newspapers in Bristol and elsewhere in the State had carried articles stating that Price was to be given the veto power over recommendations by the Virginia Senators for Federal appointments.

"The President," he said, "has made no answer to that question except to send this nomination to the Senate."

Charges "Conspiracy"

Glass frankly charged that the Roberts appointment was part of a "conspiracy" to give Price the veto power over patronage recommendations by the Virginia Senators.

"Any appointee," he said, "would be personally offensive to me who had been the cheerful recipient of a proposition to dishonor the recommendations of the United States Senators, who are charged by the Constitution with the duty of advising on nominations."

Price, he declared, "has nothing whatever to do with Federal appointments."

He said the Justice Department official in charge of appointments had called him last May and asked that the Virginia Senators agree on an appointment for the Federal judgeship, which was created by a bill introduced by Glass.

Haste Was Urged

The two Senators first decided to recommend former Gov. George Peery, but were advised by former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings that the President was opposed to naming anybody over 60 years of age.

Thereafter, Glass and Byrd recommended that A. C. Buchanan, circuit judge of the State courts, who lives near Bristol, or Frank Tavenner, of Woodstock, assistant United States attorney for the Western Virginia District, be named.

The Justice Department, he said, had urged haste in making recommendations in order that the judge could be appointed and confirmed

5th Set of U. S. Quadruplets Born, All Healthy; 1 Extra 'No Difference' to Father Expecting 3

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

These four girls were born yesterday at Galveston, Tex., to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Badgett. They were photographed through a transom as they posed for their first picture

By the Associated Press.

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 1.—Four healthy girls were born today to a Galveston couple.

The babies and their mother were pronounced in excellent condition by Dr. W. J. Jinkins, attending physician.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Badgett, had not decided upon names for the babies, whose weights varied from 3¾ pounds to 4 pounds 9 ounces.

Badgett, a construction company foreman, was worried over the safety of his wife and children when he reached the hospital today, but after being assured they were in good condition, said:

"I'll really have to go to work now. We were expecting three, but one more won't make any difference."

Mrs. Badgett was a twin and the father has twin brothers.

The Badgett quads take their places with the Kasper quads of Clifton, N. J.; the Perricone quadruplets, of Beaumont, Tex., and the Keys quadruplets of Oklahoma.

The Kasper quads, three boys and a girl, will be 3 next May; the Perricones, all boys who have ambitions to play major league baseball, are 9, and the Keys—all girls—are the only quadruplets known to have reached maturity.

The Badgetts also step into the company of another set-of-four in Michigan, the Morlok quadruplets, of Lansing. The Morlok children are 7-year-old girls.

The Badgetts have two other children, both girls, one 16, the other 13.

14 Warring Jurors Put Under Guard

To Be Shielded From Public Talk of Case Until 2d Trial Ends; 2 Alternates to Sit

The 14 jurors who will hear the second trial of the brothers Warring—$2,000,000-a-year numbers operators—for conspiracy to defraud the Government were sequestered last night as they will be every night until they reach a verdict, probably two weeks from now.

Justice Laws ordered the 13 men and one woman sequestered ahd explained that he wished to shield them from hearing any out-of-court discussion of the case, which in the first trial exposed bribery of Metropolitan policemen, long negotiations with the Treasury by the lottery managers and a pay roll of four-score underworld henchmen of the racket.

The first trial, two months ago, in which the jurors were not locked up, ended with the jury hopelessly deadlocked, seven to five, after more than three days of deliberations.

Extent of Business Shown

The choice of two alternate jurors, to complete the twelve who finally retire to the jury room if members of the panel fall ill or are otherwise removed, was another precaution taken by the court to insure a decision at the second trial.

Accused in the sensational indictment are three tycoons of the Washington numbers racket—Emmitt Warring, 34, described as the "brains of the gang;" Leo Paul Warring, 35, and Charles (Rags) Warring, 30. The Government charges that they and Gordon L. R. Sadur, an income tax expert, conspired to defraud the Treasury of the income levies on the gang's profits from the numbers lottery.

The first trial of the case brought the first public revelation of the extent of the numbers business. The account books of the Warrings were placed in evidence and showed that they booked $4,000,000 in bets in Washington in two and a half years. The testimony showed that about a million and a quarter dollars of this toll was distributed in wages and commissions to the staff of the racket, dozens of runners, writers of tickets and a dozen office employes.

Jury Carefully Chosen

The brothers were shown to have kept up a fleet of automobiles and a truck and maintained elaborate headquarters for the lottery.

The Government charged that one of the items of income concealed from Internal Revenue agents was $13,000 paid in 1935 for protection to the police. This was alleged to have been hidden in the column of "losses" which were paid to those

300 Women Boo, Cheer for Jurors' Rights

Storm Md. Statehouse Hearing; D. C. Judge Backs Campaign

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1.—The colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady and all their sisters in between stormed the Statehouse today to demand the right to serve on Maryland juries.

They cheered; they clapped; they spoke and cajoled and threatened; finally they booed and hissed a mere man in fashion to make a Bronx fight crowd green with envy.

More than 300 women filled the House chamber, where the hearing was held when the Judiciary Committee room overflowed, and for two hours cited chapter and verse in their demand for equal rights before the courts.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of the District of Columbia courts, was the principal witness before the committee. A former newspaperwoman, a successful attorney and now a judge, Miss Raedy declared that women made eminently successful jurors, superior in some respects to men, inferior in others.

Outburst of Booing

"It has been my experience that women jurors give a case just about the same intelligent consideration as men," she said, "it depends on the intellectual capacity of the individual juror."

The outburst of booing came after Delegate William Heinekamp (Democrat), Fifth Baltimore, spoke in behalf of his bill to legalize jury service for women. His measure makes jury service optional for women, allowing them to serve if they choose. The bill introduced by the four women delegates in the House carries a clause making jury service mandatory, which the group today overwhelmingly favored.

Earlier women speakers poo-poohed the suggestion that women could not get away to serve on juries, or that they would be too shocked by obscene testimony to render a verdict.

G. O. P. Senators Uphold Sale of Arms to France

Would Let Italy and Germany Buy Too; Paris Negotiates Through British for Truce In Catalonia, Increases Border Troops To 50,000 to Stem 250,000 Loyalists

The World Scene

NAZI OFFICIALS asserted President Roosevelt's reported remarks about aiding France and Britain were an attempt to "destroy the effect" of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's "conciliatory" speech Monday and the German press attacked Roosevelt as a "war-monger."—Page 5.

FORMER PRESIDENT HOOVER charged the Roosevelt Administration was likely to lead to war, and appealed to Congress to "have this adventure clarified before we go blindly into great increases in armament."—Page 16.

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER was pictured by a German news agency as hoping to persuade Britain and France to return German colonies "at the conference table."—Page 5.

Peace Plan Reported

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Thursday), Feb. 2.—France has opened international negotiations in an attempt to arrange an armistice in Catalonia, it was learned today, and at the same time has ordered border troops increased to 50,000.

The negotiations were started, it was said, for fear retreating Spanish government troops would be forced onto French soil if the fighting continued.

Premier Daladier ordered French troops on the border brought up to 50,000 to cope with 250,000 Spanish militiamen who would be swept across the frontier should negotiations for an armistice fail and Gen. Franco's advance continue.

British Lend Aid

The negotiations with Franco, it was reported, were proceeding through British authorities at Burgos, the insurgent seat of government where France is not represented.

The German and Italian governments, diplomatic sources said, have been informed of the negotiations and have been asked to use their influence to persuade Franco to accept an armistice and give easy terms to those government fighters who would be sent to his territory.

Foreign Minister Bonnet of France has received the Spanish government ambassador several times in the last few days and also has conferred with the French ambassador to loyalist Spain, Jules Henry, who returned to Catalonia today.

Mass Surrender Proposed

It was understood mass surrender of Spanish government troops in the north was proposed.

Troops which could not be sent back into insurgent territory would be kept in French concentration camps, or with Franco's permission, would be sent to central Spain where the government still is holding nearly a fourth of Spanish territory. Whether the Spanish government would accept such a plan remained to be seen.

The French government has notified both Spanish sides and foreign governments that it cannot allow a mass retreat, possibly under fire, into France.

Stampede Feared

Perpignan, France, Feb. 1 (AP).—A stampede of thousands of Spanish government troops into France was feared imminent tonight as insurgent armies pushed steadily in the upper Segre River valley of northern Catalonia.

Arms Sale Upheld

Republican members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee last night indorsed the sale of arms to foreign governments, providing that American defense forces are given first chance at new weapons, that sales are for cash, and that all nations are allowed equal opportunity to buy.

The group, in a conference vote, favored opening to the public future committee meetings on the defense program and the sale of arms abroad except when military secrets may be involved, and publishing nonsecret parts of the record so far.

This development followed a stormy Senate session in which the revealed intention of President Roosevelt to help the democracies of the world in arming against Nazi-Fascist aggression, was attacked and defended.

Public Record Demanded

After several isolationist Senators demanded that the record of proceedings on French plane sale investigation be made public and that the President state his foreign policy publicly, Administration leaders defended the sale of military aircraft abroad as a "normal and usual procedure."

Meanwhile, Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, told the House Naval Affairs Committee that he had information that Germany was building an air base in the Caroline Islands, one of the Japanese mandated islands, with the consent of the Tokyo government. The committee is considering an Administration bill to establish naval air bases in the Atlantic and Pacific and provide $5,000,000 for developing air facilities at Guam, near the Caroline Islands.

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, who was outlining details of the Navy's base development plans, said he had not heard of any German plans in the South Seas, but declared such a development would be a serious complication to American Pacific defenses. Maas said that he would submit his information to proper authorities.

Oppose "Ideology" War

Senator Austin of Vermont, ranking minority member of the Senate Military Committee, revealed the results of the Republican conference, attended by Nye, of North Dakota; Bridges, of New Hampshire; Gurney, of South Dakota, and Holman, of Oregon. He said the group had gone on record against "any aggressive attitude on the part of the United States and were opposed to going to war in furtherance of any ideology."

Advocating public hearings on national defense "so that the Nation may speak before the policy is crystalized," Senator Austin said aircraft should be sold to Germany and Italy if they applied. Three restrictions would be placed about such sales: That the United States have priority to all new developments, that legislation be enacted to permit cancellation of foreign contracts if they prove injurious to the United States, and that sales be for cash.

Senator Austin said that he had no criticism of the President for

Agents Smash 'Most Vicious' Narcotics Ring

New York 'Catacombs' Raided by Treasury Men; 12 Face Charges

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 1.—Forty Treasury agents raided the "catacombed area" of San Juan Hill here today in an attempt to round up the "most notorious, vicious gang of narcotics peddlers in America."

The neighborhood around West Sixty-second street was thrown into such an uproar that residents telephoned New York police, who had not been told of the raid.

Maj. Garland Williams, district supervisor of the Treasury agents, said 12 known distributors had been arrested for selling the narcotics and hundreds were being questioned.

He also announced that eight New York suspects had been arrested in the past week for conspiracy to sell narcotics in North Carolina and that Dr. G. D. Gardner, of Asheville, N. C., had been arrested there as the chief distributing agent for narcotics shipped from San Juan Hill, a shabby section just above mid-Manhattan west of Broadway.

Williams said the alleged criminals were of the lowest type and that they specialized in selling narcotics to pickpockets, prostitutes and relief workers.

The Federal agents, after two years of investigation, struck suddenly in a score of dilapidated tenements, rounding up dozens of suspects.

About half the raided places were in condemned tenements and the prisoners scurried through tunnels they had dug through stone walls.

In one dark hole the agents surprised a dozen gamblers. In a flash, nine disappeared through holes leading to the roof, but only one escaped, risking his life to leap from the top of the building to another tenement.

Williams said his agents obtained heroin valued at about $3,000.

Spending Huge Sums for Arms, Slighting Health Held Illogical

Assistant Surgeon General Warns Hygiene Association of Grave Dangers From Venereal Disease; D. C. Schools Hit for Failure to Act

To build $70,000,000 battleships and $285,000 "flying fortresses" while neglecting the health of those who may have to man them in event of war is illogical, the American Social Hygiene Association was told yesterday at its annual meeting on the venereal disease problem.

The militant address on national preparedness by Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general of the public health service in charge of venereal disease control, was among the highlights of the Hotel Mayflower session, others including:

Presentation of the William Freeman Snow Medal to Surgeon General Thomas Parran in recognition of his pioneering in the drive to stamp out syphilis.

A rebuke to the Washington public school system by Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society, because "our schools do nothing to protect the young from these great health hazards (syphilis and gonorrhea)."

Senator Borah, In Hospital, Is 'Much Better'

Idaho Veteran, Ill With Grip, Reported Greatly Improved

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who was taken to Emergency Hospital yesterday suffering from grip, was reported to be "very much better" last night.

Wrapped in blankets, the 73-year-old dean of the Senate was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, accompanied by Mrs. Borah and Dr. Worth Daniels, his physician. He was stricken the day before.

It was Mrs. Borah who late yesterday reported that he was "very much better."

Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, said he had been informed by Borah's personal physician that there was "no present threat" of pneumonia.

Senator Borah, who came here in 1907, was ill several weeks last summer as a result of overwork and exhaustion. He took a long rest at Poland Springs, Me., and was afterward warned not to overexert himself.

Borah has always kept himself in shape by horseback riding. He has never used alcohol or tobacco.

Vice President Garner also was reported suffering from a cold yesterday, as were two House members—Majority Leader Rayburn and Representative Mansfield, both of Texas.

U. S. Investigating Federal Judges Besides Manton

By the Associated Press.

Judge Martin T. Manton, of New York, is not the only Federal jurist whose activities are in for investigation by the Government, it was indicated in official quarters yesterday.

Word came from Attorney General Murphy after a White House call that President Roosevelt had directed him to make vigorous efforts to disclose all the facts and parties concerned in the Manton case

Judge Manton resigned as senior member of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals after being accused of taking loans totaling more than $439,000 from persons interested in cases before his court.

More than 110,000 District drivers have not yet obtained their 1939 license plates, with but 22 more working days remaining before the March 1 deadline, it was announced yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic.

More than 5,000 drivers will be unable to get plates until warrants outstanding against them are paid.

Yesterday was the first day that a line has been seen at the Ford Building, John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where the tags are obtained.

Van Duzer said no extensions would be granted and unless all drivers yet without their new plates take prompt action, many will be unable to drive after the first of next month.

U. S. Jury to Trace Rubens' Passport

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The United States Attorney's office said today that the Rubens-Robinson passport case had been revived as a matter of Federal investigation and will be taken before a Federal grand jury on February 9.

The case grew out of the disappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Arnold Rubens in Moscow in December, 1937, while traveling with passports obtained here fraudulently in the name of "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson."

The Rubenses subsequently were found to be in Soviet prisons as spy suspects.

3-State Inquiry Sifts 16 Deaths Linked to Insurance Poisoners

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—A physician, testifying at an inquest into the deaths of four persons by what the district attorney called a "three-State poison ring" that killed to collect insurance, told a coroner's jury today one of three accused persons tried to buy typhoid germs.

Months of investigation by county officers and the United States Secret Service—because one of those held is charged with circulating counterfeit money—has led to an autopsy report that at least one of those who died had been killed slowly by poison.

Three bodies, including a father and his son—husband and stepson of an accused woman—already have been exhumed, and Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt said "10 to 12" more might be dug up.

The investigators, working with insurance company agents, have said they believe the "poison ring" extended into New Jersey and New York and that they were checking claims paid on policies valued at between $50,000 and $100,000.

Dr. Henry E. D'Alonzo testified today that Herman Petrillo, one of those jailed, had asked for typhoid germs, explaining "I've got a man in New York who can make $200 or $300 out of it."

Held in the investigation are two women and a man.

7 Killed as Russians Fight Japanese for Border Island

By the United Press.

Moscow, Feb. 1.—Fighting between Soviet and Japanese troops for possession of an island in the Argun river was reported by the government today.

The official report said seven Japanese were killed or wounded and the commander of the Soviet detachment wounded in the battle yesterday.

The government communique said 18 Japanese and Machukuoan troops seized the island and opened machine-gun fire on the Soviet detachment of five men and a second lieutenant.

The Russians returned the fire, the report said.

The communique said the Soviet charge d'affairs at Tokyo had been instructed to protest to the Japanese government and warn Japan of possible consequences.

Simultaneously an important series of military changes, by which Gen. Simon Budenny, famed cavalry leader, and Gen. Gregory Kulik, former chief of the artillery service, become vice commissars of defense, was announced affecting the Soviet European front.

Defense Commissar Voroshilov relieved Mikhail Khozin as commander of the Leningrad military district, and named him chief of the Frunze Military Academy. Gen. Kiril Meretskov, commander of the Volga military district, was transferred to Leningrad.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GIFT OF THE DOME

It is slightly painful to live in such an acrimonious period of American history. During the Roosevelt era people do not merely disagree; they issue bulls and excommunicate each other. Your adversary is not merely an errant fool; he is a traitor, a conspirator, a Tory, a Communist. Which, of course, is all poppycock. Here's a tip: Don't be carried away by the alarming noises of the day.

Hopkins and Vandenberg

. . . not opposites

In this Capital nowadays it is dangerous to praise any but nonentities. To praise makes you a laughingstock. Someone nearby smothers a horselaugh. In the past there were heroes and patriots, yes; but today? Ha! Him a patriot! The gentlest name that's been plastered on anyone prominent lately was when Ickes called Dies a zany. It wasn't really true, but it was gentle.

* * * *

We lose all the juicy, hominy-and-grits, succotash flavor of our contemporary Americans. Senator Byrd seems to some Virginians to be much the same sort of a Virginia squire that George Washington seemed to his neighbors before he became a general and got famous. But to say so would get you laughed out of most cocktail parties.

"—the Capital's mirrors distort"

To a man from Mars it would be obvious that Harry Hopkins is at least as lusty, nervy and droll a fellow, and as typically American, as his fellow Westerner, Buffalo Bill, and probably as hearty a patriot as Ethan Allen. But if you said it aloud at a dinner party every guest would look at you as if you had taken your shoes off. And Hopkins has one thing in common with Lincoln: He is as cordially detested by many nice people as was Lincoln when he was alive. I watched Hopkins and Senator Vandenberg sparring with each other, at the Senate hearing, and it dawned on me that they are not exactly opposites.

* * * *

Now, to the unjaundiced eye it is fairly apparent that Senator Tydings is much the same sort of gentleman that the great Free State of Maryland has been producing for 250 years, like James McHenry or Daniel Jenifer; but to our embattled liberals he seems a royalist like Lord Cornwallis or Gen. Burgoyne.

* * * *

If you are a casual student of American history you might see some similarities between John L. Lewis and Samuel Adams, the colonial firebrand from Massachusetts.

At close range he obviously seems no more dangerous, pugnacious or explosive. But if you're slightly afflicted with the jitters, Lewis seems a dreadful blend of Sitting Bull and Robespierre.

Both Vice President Garner and Secretary Ickes have some of the traits of Ben Franklin, though each might deny it—about the other . . . Probably both Maury Maverick and Martin Dies are just a little like their great fellow Texan, Sam Houston . . .

There's more than a touch of the Florence Nightingale in Frances Perkins, and someone who happened to know them both might perceive a slight resemblance between Molly Pitcher and that dauntless lady who sees radicals behind every bush, Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, author of "The Red Network."

Maybe it's a blessing to have all these fine extremists watching each other. I can sleep soundly at night, knowing that Carter Glass, that great patriot, will not let Senator Sherm Minton put anything over on us, or vice versa; that Representative Hamilton Fish is vigilant to see that Dave Lasser, of the Workers Alliance, doesn't deface the DAR headquarters, and that Justice Butler will not let Justice Black hide any of the constitutional amendments.

We are always measuring the stature of our living statemen against our dead ones, and noisy little men with megaphones are tireless in telling us that all our living leaders are puny and phony.

There is no sign that the shrieks of malice, fear and self-interest will abate after the Roosevelt era. From what I hear in Washington, we seem to be in for a period of super-politics when the nicest thing a politician can say about an opponent is that he is a Benedict Arnold.

* * * *

In Washington this winter, if you relish the personality of a New Dealer, you're unsound; if you relish the flavor of an oppositionist, you're a stuffed shirt, depending on who's listening—if anyone.

All this is bad for the nerves and the digestion. An era of good will after 1940 (or sooner) might add years to the lives of all of us.

* * * *

Meanwhile, my advice is that if you hear a radio speech burning with malice, tune in on a good soft dance band; and if you read a political dispatch flaming with alarm, turn to the comics.

House Revives Reorganizing Committee

Seeks Compromise On President's Request For Executive Changes

The House yesterday voted a new lease on life to a special House reorganization committee in the first move of the session to meet the President's request for reorganization legislation.

A resolution reviving the nine-member group which expired with the last session was adopted by a voice vote, following a sharp Republican assault on privileged status asked for the next reorganization bill.

A committee meeting is expected to be called promptly by Chairman John J. Cochran after Speaker Bankhead fills three Democratic vacancies on the unit.

Compromise Being Drafted

Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, will propose a basis of compromise at the first meeting. The Warren bill, not yet put in writing, will attempt to meet opposition directed at most controversial features of the Administration measure rejected last session by the House.

The compromise is reported to drop provisions for a single Civil Service administrator, and leave the Comptroller General vested virtually with his present full powers.

In debate on the Cochran resolution, Warren again told the House his efforts at drafting a new reorganization bill were directed at finding common ground on which a majority of the House could agree.

Close Fight Possible

With the present House Republican minority of 169 almost solidly committed against the President's original reorganization proposals, only 45 additional Democratic opposition votes would be necessary to again defeat the measure.

Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the special reorganization committee, led the minority attack on authority for the committee to bring in legislation without intervention of points of order against transfer of appropriations from agencies merged or abolished. Taber also demanded enlargement of the group to ten members with an additional Republican on the committee. Failing in their fight, Republicans did not demand a roll-call vote.

"This might be an innocuous bill, but we've had our fingers burned before," Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, told the House. "We don't know what kind of a bill you will bring back here. That's why we're skittish."

Public Hearings Demanded

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, called on the Cochran committee to hold public hearings on any measure proposed, criticizing the failure to do so last session.

Cochran accused Republicans of "debating what a committee is going to do before it is even created." Wadsworth had said the committee apparently has made up its mind on what it will do before it is continued.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, called the last reorganization bill brought before the House "an abomination." Fish said he will oppose any merger bill giving the President more power.

"It is time to take back some of the power the President now has," said Fish. "I know what happened to the former chairman of the Rules Committee in the last Congress (former Representative O'Connor, of New York), who opposed the Administration reorganization bill and was purged for his efforts."

Rear Admiral Sidney Augustus Staunton, who died at the Naval Hospital on January 11, left an estate valued at $186,577, according to a petition for probate filed yesterday in District Court.

The Staunton will, drawn in 1932, created a trust fund. The net income from it was designated to go one-fourth to each of two sisters, Susan and Katharine S. Staunton; 15 per cent to a brother, Archibald G. Staunton, and the balance to other relatives.

New Light System Exceeds Speed Limit, Baffles Drivers

Post Staff Photos.

Confusion has been added to Washington's complex traffic system with the installation of a new signal light timing system on Constitution avenue, motorists complained. In a 17-block stretch west of First street northeast drivers are compelled to change speed four times to "make" the lights. Signs set speeds of from 23 miles to 27 miles (above), but the downtown speed limit is 22 miles an hour. For eastbound traffic at Third and Constitution avenue, the signals are set at 23 miles and at the same intersection but regulating west-bound traffic the speed is 27 miles. Traffic Director W. A. Van Duzer said these changes in speed are necessary to permit a free flow of traffic. If the signs are complied with, the entire stretch can be covered without a stop, he said

House Gets New Process Tax Bill to Finance Farm Program

Would Yield $202,000,000 Yearly; Wallace and Senate Committee Fail to Agree on Disposal of Surplus Cotton

Secretary Wallace, following a session yesterday that produced no agreement, will meet with chairmen of the Senate and House Agriculture committees again this afternoon in an effort to draft a program for disposing of the Nation's 14,000,000-bale cotton surplus.

A two-hour conference yesterday produced a half-dozen surplus disposal plans, but produced no agreement. Stressed during the discussions, according to Senators present, was the suggestion that some of the cotton now held by the Government on loans to growers be given back to planters—in return for crop reduction agreements.

While the meeting was in session, Representative Hope (Republican), of Kansas, introduced a processing tax bill which he estimated would yield $202,000,000 a year and apply to products manufactured from wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco.

Roosevelt Disapproves Process Tax

President Roosevelt has expressed his disapproval of a processing tax, which was advanced by Secretary Wallace as a means of financing a farm program.

The Supreme Court killed an earlier processing tax in 1936, but Hope said his proposal differed in several ways, particularly in that the proceeds would not be earmarked. Money from the tax, he said, would go straight to the Treasury and Congress would appropriate each year whatever it deemed necessary to give farmers a parity price for their crops. The old law delegated authority to the Secretary of Agriculture

Rates levied by the Hope measure would be lower than those imposed in 1933. A tax of 0.5 cent a pound would be placed on white baking flower, 0.4 cent a pound on whole wheat and graham flour. A levy of 0.5 cent a pound would be put on coarse grades of cotton cloth, with the rate ranging upward on higher grades. Synthetic fibers coming into competition with cotton, such as rayon, would be taxed 6 cents a pound. Four to 30 cents would be levied on 1,000 cigars, 6 to 10 cents per thousand on cigarettes.

Would Fix Prices

In another part of the Capitol, however, plans to change the current law and substitute a "cost of production" bill for it were under way—backed by a bi-partisan group of 17 Senators, led by Frazier (Democrat), of North Dakota.

Frazier declared "low prices and small benefit payments under the present act have demonstrated to farmers they can't hope to get anywhere with it." He recalled that the bill was rejected last session by a 46-40 vote, and claimed good chances for Senate approval this year.

The bill would fix prices for most crops at a level intended to reflect the cost of production, plus a profit. Farmers would receive this price for their share of a crop consumed in this country. All buyers and handlers would be licensed.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, introduced a bill to provide for distribution to the needy of mattresses and other articles manufactured from Government-owned cotton.

Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, yesterday criticized any proposal to release loan cotton stocks, contending the move would depress market prices and "practically destroy the present cotton program, which is the fairest we have ever had."

WPA Bill Draft, Pay Clause Out, Passes Senate

Wage Differential Limit Goes Back to Conference If House Insists on It

With the single exception of wage differential features, a conference report on the $725,000,000 deficiency relief bill yesterday won full Senate approval and was sent back to the House for action today.

The wage differential proviso, limiting WPA pay differentials for the same type of work, will be put to a separate vote in the House. If the House insists on the limitation, that section of the bill will go back to conference.

A plea for permanent legislation extending legislative bans on political activities to all Government employes and to State workers paid partly from Federal funds, was made in the Senate by Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

Barkley Defends Restriction

Barkley's amendment for that purpose was modified by relief bill conferees.

The Administration leader said State employes paid from social security, unemployment compensation and Federal highway funds have been "left without protection from coercion" by the change.

Barkley denied his amendment would prevent future subscriptions to Jackson Day dinners, declaring that would be a "strained construction." He said the $100-plate dinners were held "in honor of Jackson" and revenue therefrom was an incidental consideration.

Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, chairman of the sub-committee which handled the relief bill, replied that the amendment was too broad for inclusion in a relief appropriation bill. Adams said it would have gone so far that the Democratic State chairman of Colorado would have been prohibited from asking him for a contribution. He said the conferees were "unwilling to say that no man holding office shall make a contribution."

Following the debate the Senate without record vote approved the conference action in modifying the Barkley politics ban. Barkley, in conference with Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, author of other political restrictions in the bill; Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, and Chairman George of the Senate Elections Committee, are expected to propose general legislation to make bans on political use of Federal funds permanent law.

O'Mahoney Attempt Fails

A futile effort was made by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, to modify the 25 per cent wage differential limitation in the House bill, but it was ruled out on a point of order.

Features of the report approved by the Senate yesterday provide $725,000,000 for WPA for the next five months, with a stipulation that no more than 5 per cent of workers be removed from relief rolls in February and March. The President is authorized to come to Congress for more funds if an emergency develops. WPA Administrator Harrington was directed to make a sweeping investigation of his rolls to those not in need of relief.

Reasonable Profit For Business Is Urged by Hopkins

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins said yesterday that "reasonable profits to business" were among the things necessary to achieve a higher national income.

The Secretary was explaining at his first press conference since the meeting of the Business Advisory Council of the attitude in which he discussed national problems with that group of more than 50 leading industrialists and financiers.

Hopkins said he had not outlined to the council any program for helping business but indicated that he would give the first details of such a program in a radio speech in the next two or three weeks.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, who proposed impeachment of Secretary Perkins, has been asked to appear before the House Judiciary Committee today to substantiate his charges that the Labor Secretary was guilty of "high crimes and misdemeanors."

REP. THOMAS

Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday the committee had decided to "talk things over" with Thomas. Other members said Thomas would be questioned closely about statements contained in his 8,000-word resolution calling for the removal of Miss Perkins.

Gerard D. Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, defended Miss Perkins at a closed committee meeting yesterday for delaying deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, C. I. O. West Coast leader.

Reilly, whose impeachment the resolution also requested, reiterated the contention that the case should be held in abeyance until the Supreme Court decided whether mere membership in the Communist Party is adequate grounds for deportation.

Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, the only woman Senator, had cake for lunch today—a cake with 21 candles. It was given her by office associates on her birthday anniversary. Asked what milestone she was passing, she only smiled.

Four Republican Senators joined in asking repeal of statutory authority for the President to issue $3,000,000,000 "in greenbacks."

Senators Bridges and Tobey, New Hampshire; Danaher, Connecticut, and Taft, Ohio, said the authority vested in the Administration to issue the currency "would impose hardships on small savers and investors, holders of life-insurance policies, wage earners and those with fixed incomes."

The Senate Commerce Committee approved the Vandenberg resolution for the Federal Power Commission to bring up to date an earlier unfavorable report on the Passamaquoddy Tidal Power project. It deferred action on resolutions for further study of the projected $196,000,000 Florida ship canal until next week. The committee also agreed to a resolution by Senator White (Republican), Maine, directing the War Department to complete preliminary surveys and test borings on the Passamaquoddy undertaking.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, introduced a bill to make permanent the Civilian Conservation Corps as urged by President Roosevelt. Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, announced that he will seek legislation to provide CCC enrollees with military training.

Senator Glass introduced a bill extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, scheduled to expire June 30, until January 15, 1941.

WPA Workers Testify to Vote Coercion

New Mexicans Say Political Tribute Was Extracted From Them

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 1.—A tale of alleged vote coercion, money tribute and ward politics was told from the witness stand in Federal Court today by WPA laborers testifying for the Government in the trial of 35 persons charged with committing fraud and conspiracy in the New Mexico WPA.

The witnesses, many of them in overalls and some unable to speak English clearly, testified about activities purported to have occurred before elections in Albuquerque in September, 1937, and in April, 1938.

An unbroken thread through all the testimony was the warfare for State political domination waged over those periods by United States Senator Dennis Chavez, four of whose relatives are among the defendants, and former Gov. Clyde Tingley.

Synopsis of Testimony

A synopsis of Government testimony showed the following principal allegations:

1.—WPA laborers, making $48 a month, were asked to contribute $1 a month to their foremen for undefined "benefits."

2.—Workers were compelled to purchase as many as eight tickets at 25 cents each to dances many did not attend, nor expect to attend.

3.—Pay cuts and firings followed laxity among workers in observing political hints from their WPA bosses.

Tells of Pay Cut

"I'm a free-born American citizen," he said.

Robert Perea, brother of one of the defendants, testified his pay was cut from $1 to 55 cents an hour after he refused to move within the city limits prior to the city election in April.

George Norman, a disabled war veteran, told of being fired from a project when it was learned he lived outside Albuquerque. He testified he went to Salamon Tafoya, a supervisor and defendant, and was told: "If you move into my precinct I'll see you get work."

Rail-Bus Kills Man At Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 1 (AP).—J. F. Kiser, 65, retired merchant, of near Bridgewater, was killed today when struck by a motor bus on the Chesapeake-Western Railway, on the southern outskirts of Harrisonburg.

Jesse Deal, operator of the motor bus, said he blew his whistle for some distance, but that Kiser did not heed it. Officers said Kiser was ahrd of hearing.

Citizens Row Over Calvert St. Zone Proposal

Residents Argue on Changing of Area to Commercial Zone

Embattled citizens argued pro and con for several hours yesterday before the District Zoning Commission over a proposal to extend the commercial zone along Calvert street northwest between Biltmore street and Columbia road.

Property owners residing on streets adjacent to Calvert street vigorously opposed the proposal on the grounds the neighborhood was adequately supplied with commercial opportunities. In this respect, these owners were upheld by John Nolen, jr., representing the Zoing Advisory Council. Nolen produced a map showing that the neighborhood contained "sufficient commercial establishments" and that the addition of any commercial area would be "unwarranted."

"Conditions Growing Worse"

Emphatically opposing this stand was Mrs. J. E. Schafhirt, 1933 Calvert street. She said that "all who could move away from the neighborhood were doing so" and that "conditions are growing rapidly worse."

She contended the street was no longer suitable for residential purposes because of the increased traffic flow made possible by the new Calvert street span.

John J. Keegan, 1945 Calvert street northwest, said he saw no reason why the extension should not be granted.

"Pride in That Street"

Dr. V. E. Watkins, owner of property at 1923 and 1937 Biltmore street, said any change would result in "half-stores and half-dwellings."

"We have a pride in that street, and we want to beautify the approach to the bridge," he stated.

Dr. T. S. Palmer, 1939 Biltmore street, said additional commercial zoning there "is not needed."

In the waning moments of the morning session, Samuel A. King, attorney for the owners in favor of the change, called for those in the audience to rise. About 30 persons stood up. A chorus of noes came from the group in response to King's query: "Do you think rezoning would affect property on Biltmore street?"

Louis Ottenberg, attorney for Mrs. Cuno H. Rudolph, widow of the former District Commissioner, and owner of property immediately west of the Ontario Apartments, and overlooking the Zoological Gerdans, appeared before the board to argue extension of the Residential "B" area district to include this property and permit the building of an apartment house, which he said, was the "only type of improvement possible."

The commission heard some 22 petitions all told. These included a proposed change along Massachusetts avenue, between Fifteenth and Eighteenth street, northwest, to permit taller buildings. The commission will meet Wednesday to decide the cases.

Protest High Buildings

Meanwhile the proposed change in zoning regulations to permit construction of eight-story skyscrapers in the vicinity of the Toner Health School, Twenty-fourth and F streets northwest, was firmly protested by the Board of Education.

To increase the height of buildings "would be very detrimental to the health of the boys and girls who depend on the facilities available at Toner for treatment," Superintendent Frank W. Ballou told the board.

Oklahoma League Of Democrats Elects Officers

Educational forums, social gatherings and a series of projects to be carried out in co-operation with party leaders are planned for the coming year by the Oklahoma League of Young Democrats of the District of Columbia, it was announced yesterday by Thurry D. Casey, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, new president of the organization.

Other officers elected for 1939 are Leon Keys, first vice president; Mrs. Emmaline Samuels, second vice president; Lowell Walker, secretary; Miss Marietta Stolper, recording secretary; Floyd Hadley, treasurer, and Erie H. Sherman, sergeant at arms.

The organization will hold a dance February 17, at the Willard Hotel.

House Gets Bill to Permit Taxing of Federal Employes

By James D. Secrest.

Taxation of the salaries of all Federal employes by the States and the District of Columbia is authorized under provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee.

Drafted in accordance with the recent recommendation of President Roosevelt, the measure has the approval of a majority of the committee, Doughton said, and will be reported to the House next week.

Immediate action will be sought, he added, because of the threat by Treasury officials to apply the Federal income tax to State salaries as of last year if not paid by March 15, of this year.

Doughton's bill, while permitting the Federal taxation of State and city salaries, protects them from retroactive application of the levy on the basis of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the New York Port Authority test case.

The Ways and Means Committee bill, if enacted into law, will have considerable effect on the District revenue act, according to members of the House District Committee, as it will remove the doubt as to the constitutionality of a local income tax that is applied to Federal salaries.

The House sub-committee on fiscal affairs is scheduled to hold its first meeting today and to make plans for public hearings on the $3,000,000 tax program recommended by the Citizens Advisory Committee.

Coincidental with the introduction of the Doughton bill, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, offered a measure in the Senate to permit deductions from salaries of officers and employes of the Federal Government for personal property taxes in any State or the District.

Nye's bill also would permit the filing of civil suits for the collection of personal property taxes against Federal employes.

Under the provisions of Doughton's bill, the United States voluntarily agrees to the taxation of the income of its employes by States or the District.

"The United States hereby consents to the taxation of compensation, received after December 31, 1938, for personal services as an officer or employe of the United States, or any territory or possession or political subdivision thereof, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, by any duly constituted taxing authority having jurisdiction to tax such compensation, if such taxation does not discriminate against such officers or employes because of the source of such income," the bill states.

Another provision of the bill states that any Federal income tax collected for any taxable year prior to January 1, 1939, shall be credited or refunded in the same manner as income taxes erroneously collected, providing claims are filed with the Internal Revenue Bureau after January 18, 1939.

Congress Asked To Cut Pay Roll Tax Here 50%

Marshall Reveals $10,366,000 Surplus; Suggests 1½% Levy

A 50 per cent reduction in the District pay roll tax, which would save local employers from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year, was recommended to Congress yesterday by John Hay Marshall, director of the Unemployment Compensation Board.

Explaining that there is already a surplus of $10,366,000 in the unemployment fund, Marshall suggested that the employers' tax be cut from 3 to 1½ per cent.

The recommendation was referred to the House District Committee for consideration and legislation.

Marshall also made a number of recommendations to correct what he termed "defects" in the present law.

"Eventually we will have all the money there is in the District if the surplus is allowed to accumulate as it is doing now," Marshall said. "What we desire most of all is authority to raise or lower the rate according to experience."

The report stated that the board had collected $6,476,443 in 1938 from 15,000 employers and had paid out claims to 43,992 employes in amounts aggregating $1,673,208. This left a surplus for last year alone, he said, of nearly $5,000,000.

The District government contributed to the fund, the report showed, $125,000 in 1936; $150,000 in 1937, and withheld $175,000 due in 1938 because additional funds were not needed.

Susanna Ruled 'Very Nude,' but St. Louis May See

St. Louis, Feb. 1 (AP).—Thomas Hart Benton's painting, "Susanna and the Elders," is "very nude," Director Meyric Rogers of the City Art Museum said today in deciding to ban the picture from an exhibit.

On second thought—or perhaps second look—Rogers decided to show the picture, a vivid representation of an incident recorded in the Apocraypha and Douay version of the Bible.

In Kansas City, Benton's wife said, "is it nude? My heavens, yes. Very nude." She was sure, however, that "St. Louis men would like that kind of picture."

Benton transferred the story to his native Ozarks and depicted a modern Susanna, with red fingernails and short hair, about to take a dip in a stream, with two elders watching her.

Dr. Lucy Swanton, of 1464 Belmont street northwest, was the only woman to pass the recent Ohio State medical board examination, it was reported here yesterday, and thus began to realize her lifelong ambition to "keep in touch with humanity."

She received her M. D. degree from George Washington University last year.

France Leaves Fund to Wife

MRS. TATIANA FRANCE

Princess Left $150 a Month By Dr. France

Divorced Wife Gets Half of What She Drew as Alimony

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., Feb. 1.—The will of the late Dr. Joseph I. France today set up a $150 monthly income for his divorced Russian wife, who was drawing $300 monthly from him pending settlement of alimony litigation.

The former Maryland Senator and one-time contender for the Republican Presidential nomination, divided the bulk of his estate among a brother, a sister, a niece and a nephew.

His attorney, Joshua Clayton, of Elkton, estimated the net worth of the estate at about $400,000, including about $209,000 worth of insurance.

The will set up a trust fund for Mrs. France, the former Princess Tatiana V. Dechtereva, and another to provide $50 a month jointly for her mother and sister.

Dr. France bequeathed the remainder of his estate, set up as a trust fund, to his brother, Clemens J. France, of Providence, R. I.; a sister, Mrs. Marguerite Dennison, of Johnstown, N. Y.; a nephew, Bretnale K. Lathbury, of Philadelphia, and a niece, Evelyn Thacher, of Morristown, N. J.

Another trust providing $100 monthly was set up for Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Lyon, Baltimore. Lump sums of $1,000 and $500 were left Helen Craig Thompson, a former secretary, and Catherine Craig, present secretary.

Dr. France died Wednesday night.

His will was drawn May 16, 1938, only a few weeks before a divorce was granted. France married the Russian noblewoman in Paris in 1927, three months after the death of his former wife.

She said she left him in 1931 because "he had to devote all his time to the campaign," but France contended she deserted him and went to Paris.

Forum on District Set for This Month

The first public forum on District affairs will be held probably late this month, Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, said yesterday after the committee had approved his proposal. Randolph said he would discuss plans for the forum with Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, ranking minority member of the committee.

Senator Borah, Ill With Grippe, Is 'Much Better'

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who was taken to Emergency Hospital yesterday suffering from grippe, was reported to be "very much better" last night.

Wrapped in blankets, the 73-year-old dean of the Senate was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, accompanied by Mrs. Borah and Dr. Worth Daniels, his physician. He had been stricken the day before.

Senate Monorail Outdated by House 'Magic Carpet'

House members who have for years looked with envy on the monorail car that runs underground betwen the Senate and the Senate Office Building are about to be rewarded for their patience.

A supplemental estimate of $200,000 for the Architect of the Capitol to pay for installation of a "magic carpet" in the House subway was sent to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The "magic carpet" will operate on the principle of an escalator, except there will be no stairs. Two 4-foot strips of a "moving sidewalk" will run between the House and the two House Office Buildings.

Dies Inquiry Asked on Cause Of Communism

Hearings End Today On Proposal to Extend Investigation

Broadening of the Dies un-American investigation to include a special study of the "causes" of communism yesterday was proposed to the House Rules Committee following a day marked by sharp clashes between Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, and House opponents of his inquiry.

Extended study of the underlying causes of communism was proposed by Representative James F. O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana, almost the sole witness to indorse the investigation in a day set aside for opposition testimony.

"We know without investigation that communism is here and is spreading," O'Connor told the committee. "What we need to know is why it is spreading and then to take legislative steps to eliminate the cause."

Hearings Conclude Today

Hearings on the Dies resolution to continue the investigation for another two years will be concluded today before the Rules Committee, which later will meet in executive session to act on the measure. An attempt will be made to move the legislation into the House for consideration tomorrow. Sufficient votes in the committee to extend the inquiry for at least another year were believed assured. A separate resolution providing funds to finance the study will be considered by the House Accounts Committee.

Both Dies and Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, were called to order for sharp personal exchanges yesterday after Dies repeated charges that Keller closely followed the language of a communist publication in a radio speech he made January 20.

Keller denied he had seen the publication and accused Dies of using tactics "you used in your investigation." The Illinois Democrat asked the committee not to "rush" the legislation into the House tomorrow and urged a thorough study of Dies committee hearings before action. He also asked that Dies be required to publish the names of persons who have offered to put up money from their own pockets to continue the inquiry.

Accuses Dies of Unfairness

In a stormy morning session, Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, said he favored continuance of the investigation, but by a committee not headed by Dies. Dingell accused the Dies group of unfairness and irresponsibility in permitting a witness to call Attorney General Murphy a Communist and in not giving Murphy an opportunity to deny the charges.

"No one ever charged Murphy with being a Communist," Dies hotly retorted. "Your statement is untrue. Will you take it back?"

"You at least allowed that impression to go out and aided in the assasination of the greatest character Michigan ever produced," said Dingell.

He'll Decide Weather or Not

Groundhog Lodge Calls Many; Only Garner Is Chosen

Quarryville, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—Telegrams and letters applying for membership in this tiny community's Slumbering Groundhog Lodge cluttered the offices where the faithful planned tomorrow's weather forecasting ceremony—but only Vice President Garner crashed the organization's closely-guarded gates.

He was elected an honorary member, one of seven men thus adopted by the lodge which annually parades to a groundhog hole down in the swamp hollow country and finds out to its own satisfaction what weather is in store for the next six weeks.

Three others, all residents of this southeastern Pennsylvania farming section, came in as regular members.

Secrecy will surround the dawn trek so "city folk" or spies from other Pennsylvania lodges won't learn the Quarryville formula.

Prison Menu Strike Lasts Four Hours

San Quentin, Calif., Feb. 1 (AP).—Nearly 1,500 convicts who rebelled against San Quentin's menu went peacefully into their cells at lock-up time tonight after having milled angrily about the prison yard for four hours.

Prison officials said a few of them voluntarily entered the mess hall shortly before lockup time at 4:30 p. m. and ate their noon meal, which had been kept on the tables.

Nazis Say They Seek Colonies Without Fight

Hitler Hopes Britain, France Will Find Transfer Desirable

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler was represented by an authoritative Nazi news service tonight as hoping by peaceful methods to persuade Great Britain and France that the voluntary return of war-lost German colonies is necessary and desirable.

"Regarding the colonial question," the service, Dienst Aus Deutschland, said, "one of the points involved is whether it will not be possible, in view of all the experiences of the past year, to clarify this important problem at the conference table."

Four Possibilities Seen

In such a conference it was believed Hitler might have four possibilities of achieving action:

A threat—effectively used in the German-Czecho-Slovak crisis last September—that the Fuehrer's demands increase with every moment of delay.

A threat of forcing German exports at a breath-taking rate.

The desire of other European countries, notably Poland, for colonial possessions. Observers believed Hitler could threaten to unite those nations into a front of "have-nots" against the "haves."

The assurance of Italian support. Hitler Youth Leader Baldur Von Schirach's monthly magazine, Will and Power, printed a prophecy by Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that Germany's colonial demands would be satisfied in some form or other in the near future.

The service disclosed Germany was forcing her foreign trade in the hope of bringing about the return of the colonies which it asserted had proved to be losses to the countries holding mandates over them.

Purchases Here Increase

German purchases from the United States during 1938 increased 43.5 per cent over the previous year despite diplomatic tension between the two nations during the latter part of the year, official trade figures disclosed today.

The volume of Germany's foreign trade showed a 1.4 per cent increase during the year, but imports still exceeded exports by 192,400,000 marks ($76,960,000).

The United States in 1938 boosted her exports to Germany by 122,700,000 marks ($49,080,000), to a total of 404,600,000 marks ($161,040,000), while German goods sold to the United States decreased a total of 149,300,000 marks ($59,720,000).

Sen. Davis' Secretary Named to Pa. Labor Post

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—Gov. James today appointed Frank K. Boal, secretary to Senator Davis, as deputy secretary of labor and industry in Pennsylvania.

revealing his foreign policy to the Senate committee in secret. The President, he asserted, should have full control of foreign affairs, subject to the Senate's responsibility to ratify treaties and agreements.

Accounts of what the President said at his meeting with the Senate Military Committee on Tuesday differed according to the interpretation placed on his frank statement of the world situation. One member of the Senate group said that the President had declared that in the event of a world war the frontiers of the United States would be in France.

Variously Quoted

Two other committee members, however, denied the President had made any such statement, but declared he had said that in the event of a world war, the United States would be almost inevitably dragged in sooner or later.

Other sources said the President had stated that the United States should assist Great Britain, France and other democracies to arm against the growing aggressive strength of Germany, Italy and Japan. Such a step would aid employment and gear our aircraft industry for the mass production methods required when our own air expansion program is approved by Congress, the President was quoted as saying. Senators said he had urged this step as a means of preserving world peace, and had made plain that the co-operation did not contemplate an alliance with the other democracies.

Questions at the White House as to the truth of the conflicting reports were met with a statement by one of the secretariat that "it was the same old story," that accounts differed, depending on which Senator you talk to.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, touched off the Senate debate yesterday with an announcement that he was withdrawing from further executive sessions of the military committee until the record of the proceedings was made public.

"While to others this matter may be a tempest in a teapot," he declared, "I see all this national defense preparation, foreign military purchases, secrecy, talk of quarantine and sanctions, and Chamberlain's statement that England was backing up America, as a repetition of 1917."

After Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, had declared he would move at the next meeting of the committee to publish the complete testimony, Senate Majority Leader Barkley declared that the purpose of having closed sessions was to keep military secrets from foreign nations and that there was no intention of hiding anything from the American public. He criticized the "leaks" from the committee.

Johnson Denounces Sale

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, one of the "irreconcilables" who opposed ratification of the Versailles Treaty, declared the "fundamental question involved is whether the United States shall be eased into war and our people not know it." He denounced the plane sale, adding that if it had not been for the airplane crash which started the investigation "the people would never have been informed."

Senator Barkley demanded to know whether the sale of planes constituted a violation of "any treaty, or any obligation of this country, the neutrality act or any provision of international law." Senator Johnson admitted that it did not and Barkley asked how it could drag us into war "if we are doing what people have always done." The Californian asserted that it was the secrecy of the deal which disturbed him.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, declared that Administration critics would give a false impression that the people of America lack confidence in the President.

"This country is not contemplating entering war or joining other nations in the prosecution of war," he asserted.

Senator Clark contended it was "unusual and unprecedented" to sell latest type military planes to a foreign government. Barkley asserted we are "promoting our own interests" by gearing aircraft factories for the American plane program, and Clark promised to "explode that contention if the record is ever made public."

Senator Schwart (Democrat), of Wyoming, urged that the Senate wait until the committee finished its hearings and prints the proceedings before accepting the opponents' contentions. The debate ended as Senator Reynolds declared that the "real menace" was not Germany and Italy, as urged by many in Congress, but communism.

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury to reveal the operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund used to maintain even foreign exchange. A high Treasury official immediately denied that any diversion of the fund was thought of in the French plane purchases, but Senator Austin joined Lodge in advocating a public accounting.

Pittman, King Favorable

Support of the President's stand came from Senators Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, and King (Democrat), Utah. Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that the United States should help the democracies against Germany and Italy "with every means short of war."

Seven peace societies issued a protest against the President's foreign policy and defense program, declaring that "with France as our Eastern border and Guam as our Western frontier, he wants us to police the world."

Nazis Picture Roosevelt as Peace Wrecker

Official Berlin Says He Tries to Ruin Effect Of Hitler's Speech

By the United Press.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—President Roosevelt is attempting "to destroy the effect" of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's "conciliatory" speech of Monday, Nazi officials said tonight after the press had attacked the United States Chief Executive as a "war monger."

Official Nazi quarters made public their interpretation of Mr. Roosevelt's activities as the newspapers accused the American President of fomenting war in Europe "for the benefit of Jewish bankers."

A statement released to the foreign press said that Germans were "extremely astonished" at President Roosevelts reported utterances before the Senate Military Affairs Committee about aiding Britain and France.

Remarks Astonishing

The statement said that "political circles here characterize the remarks of President Roosevelt before the military committee as very astonishing. The impression here is that President Roosevelt, with this maneuver, not only sought to combat internal difficulties but also to disturb the effect of Fuehrer's speech obviously made throughout the world."

The pronouncement said the purchase of American-built planes by France, reported to be the cause of the President's remarks before the military committee, had been followed with interest in Berlin.

"It is obvious there are certain political connections clear in that affair which placed the alleged love of peace of certain American personalities in a strange light," the statement said.

The statement said it was "generally assumed that the French airplane purchases were carried out with the help of American Ambassador William Bullitt, one of President Roosevelt's intimate friends and also an earlier confident of Lenin."

Bullitt formerly was the United States Ambassador to Moscow, after the death of Lenin, the Bolshevist revolutionary leader, in 1924. He was in Russia prior to Lenin's death.

The statement added that "chiefs" of the American army and navy" opposed the French airplane transaction.

Several Berlin papers said such a deal as the sale of airplanes to France should be classed as treason "except for the fact that it was inspired by the White House."

Britain Hails Stand

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 1.—President Roosevelt's reported willingness to help Great Britain and France rearm was hailed with satisfaction today in London and Paris and bitterly condemned in the Nazi and Fascist capitals.

Italian papers charged the President with "war-mongering pessimism."

The British and French press quickly proclaimed in headlines: "U. S. A. Frontier Is in France—Roosevelt." Circulation of reports of the President's statements after what were regarded as conciliatory speeches by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler in the last two days sharply encouraged Paris markets.

British officials asserted they knew nothing about any "understanding for positive commitments between the United States and Britain for the sale of planes and other war material," but French officials obviously were jubilant over the American President's attitude.

It was believed generally that Roosevelt's views were discussed at a special cabinet meeting in London tonight. Chamberlain also had an opportunity to speak of them with King George when he went to Buckingham Palace.

The cabinet meets for the third time in two days tomorrow to discuss defense and the Arab-Jewish conference on Palestine which the premier will open Tuesday.

Nazi Papers Angry

The Italian press carried only brief reports of the meeting with the Senate Military Committee but what the papers used took the same tone as the German comment.

In France, L'Intransigeant reminded it readers that the reports were of a secret conference, but added that in case of war France and Britain probably would be backed by the "unlimited resources" of the United States.

The Leftist le Soir defined the President's reported statement as the "real response to Monsieur Hitler" and said Roosevelt had established Britain and France as the advance defense line against the "totalitarian menace."

Dr. Parran Receives Medal for Fight Against Disease

Mrs. Roosevelt complimented Dr. Thomas Parran (left), Surgeon General off the Punblic Health Service, yesterday when he was presented the William Freeman Snow Award of the American Social Hygiene Association. Dr. Livingston Farrand (right), president emeritus of Cornell University, made the presentation in honor of Dr. Parran's work in promoting antivenereal disease campaigns

$5,000,000 for venereal disease control throughout the country during the year beginning July 1, 1939. That amount has been authorized, but only $3,000,000 has been approved by the Budget Bureau.

Laudation of Dr. Parran by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was a guest at the luncheon meeting, for his leadership in the campaign.

Dr. Parran's warning that no matter how excellent the drugs or doctors, "nothing important will occur unless we, as a people, understand our need for such service, unless we are willing to use it intelligently and faithfully, and unless we make the clear cut choice to spend tax money for the prevention of misery due to syphilis and gonorrhea, rather than bear the larger costs of care for the stricken."

A reminder Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Secretary of the Interior, that new cases of syphilis occur at the rate of one a minute, and the disease takes more lives than automobile accidents.

Dr. Vonderlehr said it has been estimated that 324,000 of the Nation's 20,000,000 men between the ages of 20 and 39 are infected with syphilis.

Agrees Arms Essential

"We as a Nation have agreed that we must have a strong national defense," he said. "We have unhesitatingly authorized the purchase of flying fortresses at a cost of ,285,000 each, and the construction of battleships at a cost of $70,000,000 each. Armaments are essential to national defense. Alone, they do not prepare us for war.

"Is it not a waste of money and of men to spend millions on the treatment of syphilitic soldiers as we did during and shortly after the World War and provide inadequately for the civilian control of syphilis before hand?"

In accepting the William Freeman award "for distinguished service to humanity," Surgeon General Parran noted the wide gains which have been made in the last three years against venereal diseases. Twenty-nine State health departments now have full-time control officers, compared with 16 then. Every State except Utah is furnishing free drugs for poor patients, compared with 37 three years ago.

Today, for the first time, all States furnish free diagnosis tests for both syphilis and gonorrhea, 44 States have case-finding services and 10 require premarital physical examinations, Dr. Parran pointed out.

Credit for progress made to date, he said, belongs to Dr. Snow, general director of the American Social Hygiene Association; the association itself; the country's doctors and public health officers, and such citizens' bodies as the General Federation of Women's Clubs, American Legion and Junior Chamber of Commerce, as well as Congress, for its enactment of the national venereal disease control act last year.

Dr. Parran received the medal from the hands of Dr. Livingston Farran, president-emeritus of Cornell University, who was chairman of the luncheon meeting.

At the round table discussion which followed the luncheon, Secretary Everett, of the local society, deplored the exclusion from the public schools' curricula of social hygiene courses. His organization, he said, advocates adequate instruction in sex education, reproduction, family relationships and the control of all communicable diseases.

Glass, Byrd Halt Approval Of Roberts

Roberts

during the last session of Congress.

Glass said the first notice he and Byrd had of the Roberts appointment was through newspaper articles stating that Roberts was to be named as a rebuke to the Virginia Senators for opposing Administration legislative proposals.

Both Senators have been consistent advocates of economy in Government expenditures. They were also opponents of the President's court reform bill, which was killed by the same committee which yesterday recommended that the Senate reject the Roberts nomination.

"Ample Time" Given

Glass said he had given Roosevelt "ample time" to answer his question whether Price had been awarded a veto over Senatorial patronage recommendations, and that "he has confirmed the report by this appointment."

Referring to witnesses appearing in behalf of Roberts, he said he could "fill five rooms like this," with Virginia judges, attorneys and prominent citizens favoring Buchanan, "whose record as a circuit judge is not surpassed in the State."

"I just wanted to assure the committee," he declared, "of the character and reputation of the men the Virginia Senators recommend for the place."

Pauses for Challenge

Mr. Roosevelt, he declared, selected, out of six candidates for the judgeship, the "one candidate personally offensive to the Virginia Senators."

He paused at one point to permit "anyone in the audience" to challenge what he had said about Buchanan's ability and reputation. There was no response.

Glass confirmed a statement made by Roberts when he was on the stand in his own behalf that he had not solicited the indorsement of the Virginia Senators.

After Glass had concluded, Price rose and said he knew nothing about the projected appointment of Roberts except that Joseph B. Keenan, assistant attorney general in charge of appointments, had called him and asked him what he thought of Roberts. He also denied responsibility for the newspaper articles regarding his own "vets" power.

"We are not that simple," Glass retorted. "Keenan called you because he was told to do so."

He declared Cummings "never had the slightest idea of following the recommendations of the Virginia Senators regarding the judgeship."

Votes Listed

Senators opposing the Roberts nomination were King, Utah; Van Nuys, Indiana; Match, New Mexico; Burke, Nebraska; Pittman and McCarran, Nevada; Connally, Texas; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Hughes, Delaware; Miller, Arkansas, and Logan, Kentucky (Democrats), and Borah, Idaho; Austin, Vermont; Danaher, Connecticut, and Wiley, Wisconsin (Republicans).

Those supporting the President were Ashurst, Arizona, committee chairman; Neely, West Virginia (Democrats), and Norris, Nebraska (Independent).

Confirmation Doubted

In view of the overwhelming opposition, Senators believed there would be little chance of confirmation. The vote was regarded as a slap at the Administration for "spite" appointments, and a defense of the traditional control which Senators of the party in power have over Federal appointments in their own States.

Roberts, under questioning by George M. Warren, of Bristol, his attorney, said that, in the 24 years that he had served as judge of the corporation court in Bristol, the appellate courts had seversed decisions by him in only 11 civil and 7 criminal cases.

Service Called Outstanding

He was unable, under questioning by Senators, however, to give the number of cases in which the appellate courts had definitely affirmed opinions by him. The number, he suggested, would be at least 100 civil and 50 criminal cases.

Price declared Roberts' service as a judge had been outstanding. He added that "he has in unstinted measure the confidence and affection of the people of Virginia."

Trinkle said Roberts was "as highly respected a man as we have in Virginia." He declared 95 per cent of the people of southwest Birginia wanted to see him confirmed.

Davis wanted to "bear witness to the character, reputation, ability and good citizenship of Judge Roberts."

The committee refused to allow Warren to present 12 or 15 additional witnesses who had not previously asked to be heard.

Roberts declared, under questioning by Warren, that he had no knowledge, at the time his appointment was under consideration, that it was personally objectionable to the Virginia Senators. He said he had not solicited support from anybody, but that his friends had.

Before the hearing King and Van Nuys said they were ready to vote against the appointment without a hearing. Borah, although ill, asked Ashurst to cast his vote in accordance with Glass' wishes.

'Daily Worker' In Court Trouble

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Daily Worker, a New York daily newspaper which calls itself the "central organ of the Communist Party," was ordered by the State supreme court today to show cause why it should not be enjoined from publication until it complied with the general business law.

Assistant Attorney General Benjamin Heffner contended the paper had failed to publish, as required by law, the names and addresses of its officers and managing agents.

Heffner said plaintiffs in suits were unable to obtain the names of any officers on which to serve papers.

Jefferson Shrine Bids Are Invited

Specifications for the new Jefferson Memorial, bound into 200 page volumes, each accompanied by 34 drawings, were sent out from the National Park ervicSe to prospective bidders last night. Sixteen contracting firms and 10 stone quarry companies, Park Service engineers said, received copies.

Present deadline for the bids on the main memorial construction is March 3. The foundations are scheduled to be finished by June 15.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

RKO-Radio Hits Peak In Film of 'Gunga Din'

Grant, McLaglen and Fairbanks Are Starred; Department Mail Suddenly Becomes Heavy; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

It is an adroitly fashioned and skillfully articulated screen play that Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht have fashioned from suggestions in the Kipling poem for their epic film version of "Gunga Din." They have concocted a melodrama of far-flung proportions that is as compactly filled with dramatic surprises as it is with thunderous and tumultuous action. They have personalized a story that might easily have wandered away into one of those vague expositions of "historical" empire building and so lost much of its present forcefulness and concentrated interest.

BELL

They have been deft, too, in avoiding too much obvious reliance upon the Kipling poem as a camouflage for their own dramaturgic shortcomings. On the evidence of this picture, they have no dramaturgic shortcomings. They felt no need to rely upon Mr. Kipling except in the most remote sort of way, and so they didn't.

To make clearer what I mean, one approaching yesterday afternoon's preview of "Gunga Din," in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, did so with an assurance bred of past experience that the film would open with a rolling screen reproduction of the poem from which the picture derives its name. That was a complete misapprehension. The reading of a stanza or two of the Kipling lines came at the end of the picture, over the body of the water-boy who had proved himself a hero and won a high place on the honor roll of the British army in India. That was only the first of a series of preconceived notions of the stereotyped manner in which "Gunga Din" would be brought to the silver sheet to be amazingly and conclusively shattered.

All of this, of course, was faulty thinking. There is nothing stereotyped about "Gunga Din." It is beyond question the most impressive production that RKO-Radio ever has brought to the screen, not even excepting "Cimarron." It is a picture that surges with action of the most violent and hair-raising description; it deals intreestingly, humanly and excitingly with the deep patriotism and adventurous spirit of three sergeants in the service of the Queen on a distant outpost of the Empire. A romantic touch is lent the developments by the enthusiasm of one of the three to quit the army and become a married tea merchant, enjoying the placid pleasures of domestic life in pastural precincts. That just doesn't come off.

Climax Reaches Blistering Intensity

What does come off is a series of turbulent and nerve-tingling episodes in which suspenseful events mount to a final climax that I should say never has been equaled on the screen for its realistic simulation of armed repression of revolt. The thing will literally bowl you over.

There are elements of drama, vagrant touches of comedy, momentary periods of romance and other ingredients of a handsome entertainment woven into his expansive mosaic by Director George Stevens that will not be gone into here and now. I might go so far as to say that "Gunga Din" does not at all times maintain the top velociyt of its climactic scenes, but that seems to be unimportant, because "Gunga Din" opens with action that would do for the climax of most pictures and then goes on from there to demonstrate what action really can be like when a director buckles down and puts his mind to it!

Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., have roles so evenly balanced in importance and appeal that there is nothing to choose among them. They do a grand job, individually and collectively. Incidentally, there will be a review of "Gunga Din" in these columns—I hope—on Friday morning, following tonight's premiere performances on Fifteenth street.

Regarding those premiere performances there is more than a little that you ought to know. The current feature of the RKO-Keith bill, "The Lady Vanishes," will be continued through the 5:30 p. m. showing this evening. While the box-office will remain open continuously for the sale of "Gunga Din" seats, the house will be closed to patrons after the beginning of "The Lady Vanishes" until approximately 6:45 p. m. It then will be cleared and thrown open to the new audiences for the premiere. "Gunga Din" will be shown twice tonight—at 7:30 and 9:35 o'clock. So now you do know.

Capitol to Inaugurate "Swing Sessions"

Having completed six weeks of "Jitterbug Contests," which seemed to prove conclusively that Washington approves of these Saturday midnight sessions, Loew's Capitol Theater announces that this Saturday a new succession of midnight revelries will be inaugurated. They will be called "swing sessions."

Phil Lampkin and his orchestra will "hit the groove," for 30 minutes of sizzling syncopation, beginning each Saturday night at 11:30 o'clock. Patrons of these performances are invited to dance upon the stage, if they feel so moved—a sort of modernized throwback to Al Jolson's performance of "Wonder Bar," in which the same innovation was introduced. Furthermore, all jitterbugs who care to present themselves in appropriate costumes will be permitted to compete for valuable cash prizes. These "swing sessions," needless to say, are in addition to the Capitol's regular scheduled performances and are open to the public at no increase in admission charges.

If you have a dancing foot this would be a fine chance to turn it loose.

So the postman continues to keep up his good and faithful work. He rang more than twice yesterday. Or it may have been on any one of several previous days—what with the President's Birthday Celebrations and all, I wouldn't know. At any rate, there repose upon this desk long letters from Ann Sheridan and John Garfield, on the Warner Brothers' lot, out in Burbank, Calif., and a shorter note from Joe Cook, over in Jersey, who is about to embark on a non-musical enterprise bearing the title of "Off to Buffalo," concerning which something was said here a few days ago. I hope eventually to get these friendly epistles read. When, as and if I do, their contents will be imparted to you here.

Some Pretty Postcards Also Arrive From All Over

Pretty postage cards I find much easier to assimilate than long letters at this precise juncture in the proceedings. So it comes about that I am able to say that four faithful correspondents spend their pennies in various parts of the world and impart these tidings to your reporter.

From Tony Muto, Washington manager of Fox Moxietone News—when he is home—dated Santiago, Chile, January 6, 1939: "Dear Nelson: Down here, the critics report on bullfights, too, and woe betide a toreador who misses. He gets hate and hisses. Best regards."

From Arthur and Helen De Titta, formerly associated with the position Mr. Muto now adorns—with the Earl of Allvine as pinch-hitter—date Rome, Italy, on a day I can't quite make out: "Hello and how are you? Having a grand stay here, combining business with pleasure. Love to our 'girl friend' and yourself." Just a little cryptic in spots.

And from Jack Powell, the blackface syncopationist, all dressed up in the uniform of a Buckingham Palace Guard and with a drum he can scarcely lift or see over: "Best regards, Your drummer boy." That would be from the Savoy Hotel in London.

So now you have read all my mail—that is to say, all but the bills and the overdrafts at the bank. Greater love than this hath no man!

It might be noted that the Civic Theater's production of Leon Pearson's original play, reviewed in other columns of today's Post, will run through next week at the Wardman Park Theater, as well as the remainder of the current seven-day period. The title, in case you had forgotten, is "Washington Merry-Go-Round." It has as fine a local cast as Director F. Cowles Strickland was able to assemble—and that is very fine indeed, by all past evidence.

Speaking-of-Merry-Go-Rounds Note

Hey, mister, will you please turn off this whirligig?

Those Hope Brothers

Bob Hope, young comedian who is currently working with Martha Raye in "Never Say Die," has six brothers. Bob is the fifth of the seven Hope boys and is the only one on stage or screen. The others are in business.

They Blawst the Bloomin' 'eathen Off His Base!

CARY GRANT, VICTOR McLAGLEN AND DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR. as they appear in the roles of Sergeants Cutter, MacChesney and Ballantine in RKO-Radio's stupendous production of "Gunga Din," opening with special premiere performances on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater tonight. This is the most pretentious and most exciting picture ever to emerge from the RKO-Radio studios

"Ballerina," at Little, Is Work Of Distinction

Story of Paris Opera Is Realistic and Finely Directed

"BALLERINA." Cinetlantics picturization of Paul Morand's novel. "La Morte du Cyone." adapted to the screen by Jean Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein, with Mia Slavenska, Yvette Chauvire, Janine Charrat, Mady Berry, France Ellys, Claire Gerard, Jacqueline Quefielec, Micheline Boudet and Andre Pernet. Ballet music from Gounod and Chopin, with incidental music by J. E. Szyfer. Reviewed Tuesday evening. At the Little Theater.

While it might seem, upon first thought, that "Ballerina," the fine new film at the Little Theater, is limited in appeal to those millions of us for whom the Paris Opera is a setting of illimitable fascination and to whom life behind the scenes is always filled with wonder, this French film is more than that. Behind the glamour and far-away charm of the outward form of this picture lies a universal study of childhood, its idolatry and tremendous seriousness.

For "Ballerina" tells the story of one of those little gamines of the Opera Ballet, whom that world calls "les petits rats." Delicately punning, Morand has called his ugly little girl Rose Souris. She is an ambitious little waif striving to remain in the ballet school which the opera runs for its future ballerinas. In keeping with the custom of the little rats, she chooses a particular guiding star to be her "godmother," Mlle. Beaupre, premiere danseuse of the opera. When a new and popular young dancer threatens to eclipse the shining Beaupre star, the unhappy Rose determines to make the interloper ridiculous. She unhinges a trap door while La Karine is making her debut. She is terrified when the young dancer breaks her leg, a fate worse than death to any ballerina. Two of Rose's cronies guess her secret and swear themselves to silence. Meanwhile, La Karina sees her only hope is in teaching others to do what she herself can do no longer.

Secret Is Endangered

Rose becomes her favorite pupil; a promising career seems to lie ahead. When Rose advances so far in her teacher's estimation, her little friends are jealous, and the secret is endangered. La Karine is stunned when some "dear friend" tells her the truth, and Rose rushes down into the cellars of the opera. In a tender scene the selfless instructor forgives her pupil for the glory of their profession.

Filmed in the authentic setting of Garnier's Opera itself, the film gains a unique reality. Much of Act IV of "Faust" is screened, a portion of Gounod's opera which is universally omitted in all opera houses today except at Paris, where the ballerinas for so long have been queens. "La Morte du Cygne" is danced to the music of Chopin by that world-renowned ballet. There is a glimpse of Paris' most popular current Mephistopheles, Andre Pernet. For balletomains there are the appearances of Mia Slavenska, one of the stars of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, now on tour in America, and Yvette Chauvire, the present premiere danseuse of the Paris Opera. And there is the Opera's own orchestra.

But above all there are the little "rats" themselves. It was Director Benoit-Levy who created the delicate "La Maternelle," which similarly told the story of little Parisians.

Janine Charrat plays Rose Souris intensely. Her scene at the trap door, just before she loosens it, is gripping and definitely climactic. Fine as this performance is, it goes to show the importance of the skilled directorial hand, a hand that guides, as well, the realistic characterizations of the other youngsters of the story.

The New Yorker

HARRY SCHOENHAUS, who is scheduled to follow Dixie Davis in testifying against Jimmy Hines, also has expressed regret—in messages in Hines' friends, and has indicated that he wishes he were in George Weinberg's place . . . Alexander Woolleott will go to Washington today. He'll dine with the President at the White House . . . Albert D. Lasker, the advertising executive and groom of the former Doris Kenyon, has arranged to became a patient at the Mayo Bros. Clinic in Rochester on Monday . . . Assemblyman Edward S. Moran, who will be tried for bribery in connection with taxicab legislation, has received permission from the prosecutors to pay up all income-tax deficiencies charged against him, to avoid additional prosecution.

JUST AFTER the premiere of "The American Way" a suggestion was made that a blonde child who appears in the opening scene be given her notice, because there are too many people onstage . . . Co-producer Max Gordon rebelled at this. "I'm opposed to the idea," Gordon told Kaufman & Hart, the authors. He became excited and announced: "When I was producing 'Sing Out the News' they wanted to cut some people from the 'Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones' number. I went to La-Guardia. I went to everybody. Those people stayed in that number. And do you know what? 'Sing Out the News' ran all season" . . . "And do you know what?" the authors replied. "This is Kaufman & Hart you're talking to. We lost $80,000 in that show."

ESTELLE WINWOOD, the actress, confessed this last night about her recent trip back from Europe . . . The voyage was an extremely rough one. And while the heavy seas pounded against the ship, the captain notified the passengers that they'd better be prepared for emergencies . . . "So what did you do?" Miss Winwood was askd . . . "I did what any true actress would do under such circumstances," she confessed. "I took out my make-up kit and made up—for the sea."

FEDERAL JUDGE MANTON, whose resignation was announced in this column on January 13—and front-paged this week—already has received an offer from one of New York's most important companies to become their general counsel. The offer includes a $50,000-a-year guarantee for six years . . . Maurice Evans, whose differences with the stage hands cut short the run of "Hamlet," thanked them last night in his curtain speech after the premiere of "Henry IV" . . . Albert Payson Terhune has made the Social Register . . . 2,000 copies of the injunction issued in the Mayor Hague case were served upon his aides Monday. Additional copies have been printed and were served throughout Jersey City today.

AMERICAN AIRLINES will christen one of its new planes "The Stork Club" . . . Medora Roosevelt, whose parents once barred her from all the night clubs, left the hospital last week end and, without removing her bandages, went straight to Tony's . . . Wilfred Funk's name will appear on the next issue of "Your Personality," which will become a monthly. Funk also has a third pocket digest ready, but hasn't decided upon a name for it . . . Mae West will appear at the Frisco Fair and then go East for the New York Fair . . . The Yacht Club failed to open last night . . . Ernest Hemingway already has tired of this town and left for Key West.

AT THE EXPLORERS' Club they're telling of an expedition made by Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews into the Gobi Desert . . . A few days after Dr. Andrews started, another expedition followed . . . and later, in the vastness of the Gobi Desert both expeditions chanced to meet . . . The leader of the second group walked up to Dr. Andrews and began, kiddingly: "Dr. Livingstone, I believe" . . . "Oh, no," was the reply, "Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews."

THAT $67,000 which was the basis of a bribery indictment against Commissioner Charles Harnett actually was delivered to three Tammany leaders, one of them now dead. It was used for campaign purposes, but was listed, in the reports, under fictitious names, because the contributors didn't want their identities revealed . . . The Duke and Duchess of Windsor have ordered two American cars. Because of the "Buy British" campaign, they ordered the cars from Canada . . . Contrary to all reports, Fredric March put no money into "The American Way" . . . El Rio paid its employes and gave up the ghost.

British Like Kruger

Despite the fact that he appears in not more than two English pictures yearly, Otto Kruger, who plays a leading role in "Disbarred" with Gail Patrick and Robert Preston, is one of England's favorite screen actors. A London magazine, in a poll of fans, acclaimed him as "the golden speaking voice of the British screen."

Option on Chan's Contract Renewed

After studying reactions to the preview of "Charlie Chan in Honolulu," Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel has picked up a year's option on the services of Sidney Toler, who played the title role.

Toler had been set already for "Charlie Chan in Reno," scheduled to begin production next week, but the new arrangement calls for at least two more pictures during 1939.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 1.—You know what it means when critics give four bells to a picture. I'd like to ring five for "Gunga Din." It's the most exciting bit of action I've seen in years. And you don't need technicolor when you can get Rembrandt effects in black and white shadows.

HEDDA HOPPER

It's a toss-up between Vic McLaglen and Cary Grant for top honors. I could do with that Schiaparelli turban Cary wore. And Montague Love, who's given fine performances for years, couldn't be topped when he reads the famous Kipling line, "For you're a better man than I am, Gunga Din." It's thrilling to see our tried and true standbys come into their own. Young Doug is excellent but Joan Fontaine's beauty and ability were confined to a bit part.

We have Eddie Buzzell to thank for the fun of "Honolulu." Gracie giggles. Ain't I'll be darned if they haven't made her a glamour girl—she's ravishing. Eleanor Powell has never been as good. Her imitation of Bill Robinson in black face got a note of thanks from Bill and Bob Young should have his salary raised for playing himself double. It's all a lot of nonsense, but very funny. And you'd better book your passage now, 'cause everyone will be wanting to see "Honolulu."

I had an enchanting letter from writer Jack "Cock and Bull" Morgan from Malacca, Malaya—you know, where they make the walking sticks. The manager of Raffles Hotel gave him the recipe for making the famous Singapore Gin Sling, 'cause he runs a hash house, too. The so-and-so didn't enclose it, but he did send picture sheets from Penang which show an entire page of ads, the top picture showing there now being Gene Autry in "Old Susanna," and they've just gotten around to "King Kong."

Alfred M. Vanderbilt, jr., just took an impromptu screen test. Seems he dropped in on "Union Pacific" to do some horse trading with Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck. Cecil DeMille asked him to run through a short scene which he did, although protesting he didn't want to be an actor. "Would you play a part if it were worth while?" asked Cecil. "That's something else again," was the reply. "That's all I wanted to know." And there the matter rests. The Vanderbilts, Whitneys and Astors are keen on movie people and have backed a lot of them, but never get their own faces on the screen.

Paul Muni has bought himself a marionette theater and now gives himself a puppet show for relaxation after a hard day's work on "Juarez."

Margaret Lindsay, when poor, loved the Bay of Naples. Still romantic, but no longer poor, she's hired an artist to paint it on her drawing-room wall.

National Offers A Prize Play Next Monday

'Of Mice and Men' Leads the New Bills; Other Programs

"Of Mice and Men," the almost literal transcription of John Steinbeck's novel, is the play at the National Theater for the week commencing Monday. Winner of the New York Drama Critics' Circle award as the best play produced last season, it tells the story of George and Lennie, a pair of itinerant laborers. George is a young fellow who feels a strain of sympathy for Lennie, a weak-minded giant who yearns for affection and companionship. Guy Robertson, notable for his success on the light opera stage, plays his first "straight" role, as George, and Claire Luce, also a former star of musical comedy, but more recently a popular London dramatic actress, is the girl who disrupts the child-like Lennie. George S. Kaufman directed the cast which also includes Edward Andrews, John F. Hamilton, Grant Mills, Thomas Findlay, Lester Demon, Charles Slattery and Leigh Whipper. The fourth play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season, "Of Mice and Men," will play the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Rudyard Kipling's character, "Gunga Din" comes to full-blown screen vigor at RKO-Keith's Theater with an inaugural showing at 7:30 this evening. Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr. are the stars of this roaring story from the collaboration of Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht. The three stars play brawling, swashbuckling sergeants, in India in the service of the Queen. Sam Jaffe is in the tittle role and his dying breath sounds the bugle to warn the approaching regiment of its peril. Eduardo Ciannelli Joan Fontaine, Montagu Love, Robert Coote, Abner Biberman and Lumsden Hare are also in the cast. George Stevens directed.

Almost coincidental with President Roosevelt's request for billions to strengthen the Nation's air force, comes "Wings of the Navy" from Warner Brothers' studios to the Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday. It was produced at the United States Navy air bases at Pensacola, Fla., and San Diego, Calif., with full co-operation of the service. George Brent, recently in town for the Birthday Balls, has the leading male role and the supporting cast includes John Payne, Frank McHugh, John Litel, Victor Jory and Regis Toomey. Opposite Mr. Brent is Olivia de Havilland. On the stage, Sylvia Manon and Company, adagio dancers, will head the performers who include the Rio Brothers; the 16 Earle Roxyettes and "The Find of the Month," Yola Galli, a talented young performer of professional experience.

Another recent visitor to Washington returns to a local screen tomorrow when Eleanor Powell appears on the Capitol Theater screen in the new musical film, "Honolulu." With the popular dancer, in this setting of Hawaii, is Robert Young, in the dual role of a famous screen star, eternally pursued by his public, and an unknown pineapple planter who strongly resembles the film star. Burns and Allen handle the comedy lines of Anita Loos, Ogden Nash and Sam Hellman. Gus Kahn and Harry Warren wrote the music which includes "The Leader Don't Like Music" and the title song. The first appearance on a local stage will be celebrated by Blue Barron and his orchestra when they headline the stage show at the Capitol. The organization is noted on the air-waves as well as the recording disks, as "Blue Barron's Music of Tomorrow and Today." Also on the stage will be the Frazee Sisters, songstresses; Jerry Mann, comedian, and the Knight Sisters, adagio dancers.

That colorful fellow of the past and thrilling adventurer of the present, "Jesse James," remains on the screen at the Palace Theater for another week. It is a rip-roaring adventure story of the Missouri bandit, with Tyrone Power in the title role and Henry Fonda as his brother Frank. Nancy Kelly plays the religiously-inclined bandit's wife and Technicolor brings to the celluloid a gorgeous reality. Henry Hull, J. Edward Bromberg, Randolph Scott and Slim Summerville are others in the cast of this roisterous action picture. A Pete Smith specialty, "Penny's Picnic," is on the list of shorts which surround the feature.

Also on the return list is "Stand Up and Fight," the Robert Taylor-Wallace Beery co-starring vehicle, with a story of the Alleghanies of the 1850's when Cumberland, Md., was one of the Western outposts of the growing United States. It tells of the bitter struggle between the new railroads and the stage-coach interests as well as the practices of slave-trading which preceded the Compromise of 1850. Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford and Barton McLane also are in the cast opening tomorrow at Loew's Columbia.

"The Junior League Follies" will play three performances at the Belasco Theater opening on Friday night and continuing through two performances on Saturday. Sponsored by the Belgian government, "Dark Rapture" will open at the Belasco on Sunday afternoon. Armand Denis and his wife, Leila Roosevelt, made this film on their expedition to the Belgian Congo and have received much critical acclaim in New York for their unique documentary film.

"Fabulous Marseilles" is the travelogue at the Trans-Lux beginning Friday. "Screen Snapshots" captures the film stars on Catalina Island, and "Sky Rhythm" is a short of winter sports. "Self Control" is the Disney short which returns to the newsreel home for a second engagement, beginning Friday.

Ann Corio, who needs no introduction to Washington audiences, will be the star of the new burlesque production opening at the Gayety Theater on Sunday afternoon. On the program with the titian-haired charmer will be Mike Sachs and his partner, Alice Kennedy. Benny Moore and a large company of Gayety favorites complete the cast.

Large Rolling Stock

Paramount now has 15 airplanes, four locomotives, 30 cars and 6 French taxicabs, all of which have worked in recent pictures, including "Midnight" and "Union Pacific," the latter directed by Cecil B. De Mille.

Old Timetable Lends Authenticity

The only existent Kansas timetable of 1872 has been secured for an insert in "Dodge City," new film starring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

The schedule is so highly treasured by the Santa Fe Railroad that the studio was permitted to keep it only long enough to make a facsimile.

The timetable revealed that it took eight hours to travel between Dodge City and Newton. Today's streamlined trains make it in less than three hours.

Appalling Refugee Problem Revealed

"The Refugee—Today and Tomorrow," first factual screen story of the appalling problem which has stunned the civilized world, is the single-theme subject in the new March of Time. It is a complete camera record of the almost insoluble problem growing out of today's wars and persecutions.

Six million defenseless and pitiable victims of terrorism and intolerance—uprooted from work and homes—are brought to the screen in this amazing documentary film. March of Time laying the blame for the world refugee problem at the doors of Berlin, Rome and Tokyo.

Metropolitan

"Zaza," that melodramatically romantic tidbit salvaged from the period of the theater's heyday that marked the turn of the century, returned to the downtown screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater yesterday, with Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall and Bert Lahr in the roles of pivotal importance.

Despite all the Paramount studios were able to do in this newest picturization of a drama that brought early fame to Mrs. Leslie Carter, under the aegis of the late David Belasco, there still clings to the celebrated work the definite imprints of the earlier era in which it came to the stage. Even so, this later-day rehabilitation of a picturesque tale possesses many merits and, to many, will revive many fragrant memories. Foremost among the merits are the ebullient performances contributed by Miss Colbert and Bert Lahr.

Claudette Colbert brings to her interpretation of the title role an overflowing measure of spontaneity, charm and piquancy. The introduction of a song or two adds a new note to her vivacious portrayal. Mr. Lahr, in this subject, emerges as an actor of parts, as well as retaining numerous effective reminders of his eminence as a low comedian. Herbert Marshall, in the role of Dufresne, the aristocrat, who falls in love clandestinely and all but disrupts the lives of the touring music hall artistes with whom he becomes involved, offers a stolid and uninspired characterization which still has value as an offset, so to speak, of the exuberance of Miss Colbert, Mr. Lahr and the other minor members of the cast.

These "minor" members of the cast bear names that are among the most distinguished in the contemporary theater, including Helen Westley, Constance Collier, Genevieve Tobin, Ernest Cossart and many more.

"Zaza," in short, is as good a picture as could be made from a stage fable that is distinctly and indelibly "dated." It is supplemented on the Metropolitan screen by a well-chosen list of supplementary short-reel attractions.

'Washington-Merry-Go-Round' Given Premiere by Civic Theater

Just as all merry-go-rounds are filled with a number of things, so is "Washington Merry-Go-Round," Leon Pearson's play which was given its first performance on any stage last night, in the Wardman Park Theater, by the Washington Civic Theater. The profusion of characters, plots and counter-plots make it a cumbersome carousel revolving in fits and starts.

To last evening's large and attentive audience there were naturally many characters and incidents of unique interest. There was the large group of tourists being herded through the Capitol by a bored and recording-machine guide. There was the young son of the veteran Congressman whose missteps brought disaster to his father. There was the "typical" newspaperman, anxious for a scoop. There was even a reporter stretched out snoozing on a leather couch. There were two women fighting for peace, each in her separate way. There was the pretty young government worker whose condition, we trust, is not typical. There was the stanch, true-hearted New Dealer who was fighting for justice, right and the SEC. There was the elegant lobbyist, sipping a high-ball in the—Cocktail Lounge (non adv.) There was the charming young lady from South America whom it really would be a treat to meet.

The character of Sam Anders, the gentleman from somewhere down South, was the most real and understandable. As played by Arthur Bernard, this buoyant old "statesman" was a remarkably alive and vivid figure. His machinations for his friends constituted the most interesting sequences of the play.

Play Attempts Too Much

But all these webs are too loosely woven. True to life they are—for who but a newspaperman, as Mr. Pearson is, could know so well the local characters he seeks to describe? The difficulty is that he attempts too much. Just when one angle of the kaleidoscope gets into focus we are shifted to another character and his troubles. It is not, by the by, a play in which the characters are not related by incident. They are all part of the one story, but a story that attempts to encompass too much.

The Civic Theater has invested the new play with a fine production. The cast is an excellent one and the settings, though staggeringly numerous, are effective and changed with remarkable rapidity. There is a skillful scenic drop by G. Thomas Shanton which quite sets the kaleidoscopic tempo of the play from the very start.

Of a cast of 49 characters, with some players doubling, it would be impossible to mention all concerned. Arthur Bernard was, in the large view, the most satisfactory, as Sam Anders, threatening and rolling his pompous speeches with a loud, familiar roar. Richard Walsh is a lanky newspaperman who shows an anxious visitor behind the marble pilasters. Rudolph Watson is convincing as the member whose son has sold an appointment to West Point. Robert Miller is a rookie member of the "club" on the Hill, who won't play ball with the leaders, and Harry Westcott is an effective Admiral Cannon. Of Milton Freedman's two roles, he is at his best as Blair, the newshawk who scents a story. Mimi Norton is thoroughly credible as the chic lady from Chile, who saves her love letters, and Edith Sognier and Edward Stevlingson are the young lovers.

Many in Cast Excel

John Latimer has a fine sure touch as Mr. Moore, the earnest New Dealer of the SEC. Murray Sheehan is a fine Speaker of the House. Others in the cast include Carlton Ayers, Robert Duncan, Esther Levett, Doris Cooper, Dorothy White, Betty Clark, Marjorie Rice, Dorothy Winchcole and Eleanor Hurwitz. William M. Girvan designed the effective settings.

Director F. Cowles Strickland has given the performance as much speed and cohesion as the rambling script will permit. R. L. C.

Virtuous Omission

In one of the Sherlock Holmes stories it is recounted that the Maestro asked a representative of the official police whether he had noted the significant incident of the dog during the night.

"But," protested the dumbell from Scotland Yard, "the dog did nothing during the night."

"That," remarked Holmes cryptically, "was the significant incident."

Without drawing any parallels, much the same might be said of the speech which Premier Mussolini was scheduled to deliver in Rome yesterday, on the occasion of a distribution of posthumous medals to relatives of Italian soldiers killed in what is euphemistically called the Spanish civil war. The significance of the speech lies in the fact that none was delivered.

On Monday night Hitler asserted that "a war of rival ideologies waged against the Italy of today will, once it is launched and regardless of its motives, call Germany to the side of her friend." Such a pledge, coming on the heels of the Italian triumph at Barcelona, might very easily have stirred Il Duce to a repetition of his demands on France. The stage was all set for such an outburst, assuming the desire to make it.

But Mussolini refrained. Not a word to flutter the very tottery dovecots of Europe was spoken on the Piazza Venezia yesterday. And Il Duce's decision not to speak incendiary words is distinctly encouraging.

The tenseness in Europe at the moment is greater than at any time since Munich. The balance between peace and war hangs almost on a knife edge. It is a time when a single ill-chosen statement from certain quarters would be almost enough to precipitate disaster. And Mussolini, who is often just as sagacious as he is sometimes bombastic, declined to take a chance.

Only those whose perspicacity is as that of Dr. Watson would fail to note the incident, and to give the Italian Premier the credit which he deserves for his restraint.

A Merit System Problem

Many sincere advocates of the merit system are doubtful of its value when applied to technicians in the Government service. This skepticism is due to the well-founded belief that civil service tests are at present not sufficiently discriminating to insure selection of the highest type of specialized personnel. Recognizing the difficulty of the problem, President Roosevelt has wisely decided temporarily to exempt highly-trained professional men from the provisions of the blanket executive order extending civil service protection to thousands of Government employes.

At the same time, he has appointed a special committee to work out plans for bringing these technicians under the civil service. The aim is to develop some method of selection that will not only eliminate the unfit but also insure the recruitment of men of high caliber.

The committee of seven which has been entrusted with this delicate task numbers among its members two Supreme Court justices and the Attorney General of the United States. All the members are "outstanding advocates of civil service reform" and some of them have also had wide experience in the selection of professional, scientific or commercial personnel. Thus the composition of the committee is a virtual guarantee that constructive recommendations will shortly be forthcoming designed to strengthen the civil service system where it most needs re-enforcement—at the top.

The President's blanket order of last June, covering thousands of Government employes into the service by noncompetitive examination, is calculated to raise morale by giving employes the protection afforded by civil service status. It does not provide a very satisfactory method of gauging fitness. But so long as the protective blanket of the civil service is not extended to cover the weaklings as well as the able individuals in the upper exempt groups, no great harm is done.

The President is farsighted in granting exemptions for the professional groups until the new special committee has had opportunity to "study the many diverse problems presented in the recruiting and promotion" of such workers. This is a necessary preliminary to "an informed and wise extension of the merit system and an application of higher standards in the selection and promotion of such Government personnel."

The Neutrality Muddle

By enacting the neutrality law Congress sought to provide a brake on the President's far-reaching powers with respect to the conduct of American foreign relations. Without such a brake, it was argued, the United States would be drawn into any forthcoming world conflict as it was into the last.

The basic purpose of this legislation was obviously high-minded and admirable. All branches of the Government, all sections and classes of the American people fervently share the hope that the United States will be spared the curse of war. But the method employed by Congress to achieve this wholly desirable end has proved to be self-defeating and dangerous. Our neutrality law, by encouraging the aggressors to regard the United States as uninterested in the preservation of world peace, has undoubtedly contributed to the present highly disturbed state of international affairs. In so doing, it has helped bring war nearer and has actually multiplied the chances of our involvement.

Insofar as the Executive branch of the Government was in a position, during these last highly critical years, to throw this Nation's enormous weight on the side of peace, the neutrality law has had a frustrating effect. Our position today is now obviously more parlous than it was before Congress began this unusual intervention in the sphere of foreign relations. Not surprisingly, then, the neutrality policy, subject to the pressure of imperious events, has tended to disintegrate. Realistic considerations have crowded out doctrinaire beliefs based on wishful thinking and a sorry misreading of history.

In the Far East, the neutrality law has never even been applied. Our policy there, within restricted limits, has been increasingly to differentiate between aggressor and victim. During the past few months moral pressure has been successfully applied to American manufacturers to refrain from selling airplanes and bombs to Japan. At the same time, indirect financial aid has been given to China.

Recent negotiations for the sale of planes to France, while not coming within the purview of the neutrality law at all, since France is at peace, nonetheless indicate an active readiness on the part of the President to give entirely reasonable assistance to European democracies in their effort to make themselves strong against possible attack.

The Administration's position, in this particular, is logical and unassailable. Either it means nothing to us if Europe's democracies go down to defeat or it means something. If it means something, as all know to be the case, any aid we can give them now we render ourselves.

It happens, however, that one of France's major frontiers is that along the Pyrennes. What happens in Spain is bound to have an important bearing on what happens to France, on what happens in the rest of Europe, and on what may happen in Latin America. Yet only with respect to Spain has the Congressional brake on the President's control of the conduct of foreign relations operated with any success.

The net effect of neutrality legislation to date, therefore, has been, first of all, to hamper and to a large extent frustrate the formulation and execution of a consistent foreign policy. The second result has been to deprive a government with which we remain on friendly terms of the means to defend itself against the attack of those very dictatorships against which we seem prepared to arm Great Britain and France. This does not seem a well-articulated foreign policy.

Farewell, Begood

By all the rules the little postoffice of Begood, Va., should have shone like a candle in the Postal Guide, which, if you want to know the truth, includes such places as Wickett, Tex.; Bado, Mo., and Bader, Ill.

But shine is hardly the word for Begood, though at the very end there was something like a blaze of glory. Begood, they say, derived its name partly from that of its first postmaster, one J. B. Beazley, and partly from the nearby community of Goodwin, Va. But who would harken to a word like Begood in a land that includes Richville, Mich.; Rich Mountain, Ark., and Fame, Okla. Begood was doomed to languish. Dust gathered on the shelves, cobwebs grew over the lock boxes and perhaps birds made nests in the mail sacks.

Only when it was announced that on January 31, 1939, Begood for lack of business would cease to exist, was there a rush by collectors to obtain the homiletic cancellation of this hitherto obscure office. Such, alas, is the way of this world; few of us discover any reason to be good until it almost too late to do anything about it.

Perhaps the moral of this for postmasters is to be Clever like the one in—of all places—Christian County, Mo., and to let who will Begood. Maybe they have discovered that, though there are seven that want to be Noble, there is really only one place that wants to be Good all the time and that's down in Hampshire County, W. Va.

State Tax Burdens

In the boom years immediately preceding the 1929 collapse, Federal expenditures remained relatively steady, while local expenditures were rapidly increasing.

After 1931, however, Federal expenditures began to mount sharply, while State and local outlays were maintained at a fairly steady level. One result of the growing importance of Federal spending was to create a mistaken impression that the Federal Treasury had relieved the fiscal strain imposed upon State and local budgets by relief and emergency needs.

The recent budget messages of Gov. O'Conor of Maryland and Gov. Lehman of New York should dissipate illusions of that sort. In spite of the vast sums that the Federal authorities are pouring out for relief purposes and for pump priming, both Maryland and New York are today faced by the difficult problem of finding new taxes to cover mounting governmental costs.

During the next two years, for example, Gov. O'Conor needs $17,000,000 of additional revenue to cover an estimated deficit of that amount in his $95,000,000 biennial budget. In other words, he has to find $8,500,000 in new taxes next year and the year after if the budget is to be balanced. According to the Rawls Tax Commission, whose findings are accepted by the Governor, the "fundamental reason why it is necessary to raise additional revenue is because the State over the last six years has assumed permanent obligations under the head of social security and relief to the extent of at least $5,000,000 annually." In short, new taxes are needed, not to meet one-time expenditures, but to finance recurrent outlays.

The situation of New York provides an even more striking illustration of the problems presented by a mounting volume of expenditures. During the current fiscal year it is expected that New York State will spend over $400,000,000—a sum whose magnitude can be best gauged by remembering that in 1897 the ordinary expenditures of the Federal Government, exclusive of postal expenditures, amounted to only $365,000,000. Gov. Lehman is faced by the necessity of finding new taxes to cover an anticipated deficit of $33,000,000 for the present fiscal year and of $24,000,000 for the coming year, when expenditures are expected to reach the record figure of $411,000,000.

As in the case of Maryland, New York's need for new revenue is attributed largely to relief needs. "It must be borne in mind," Gov. Lehman said in his budget message, "that whereas today $85,400,000, or more than 20 per cent of our entire budget, is for unemployment relief, not a dollar appeared in the executive budget as recently as 1931 for this purpose."

Since neither Maryland nor New York wishes to follow the example of the Federal Government, which is piling up deficits that threaten to become chronic to finance recurrent outlays, they must perforce put the screws on taxpayers. It is hardly necessary to say that the Federal Government will have to make allowance for all these State impositions when it begins to look about for sources of new tax revenue with which to balance its own budget.

In The Name Of Relief

A Federal grand jury which has been inquiring into WPA frauds in New York City has come to the conclusion that the isolated examples of law-breaking brought to its attention "indicate the presence of that common factor in all public affairs: graft and the condonation of graft." Consequently, in a most unusual petition, the grand jury urges a "broad, inclusive investigation of all Works Progress Administration fraud cases under the jurisdiction of one prosecutor."

The presentment cites typical instances of fraudulent practice such as submission of false claims, irregularities in the certification of vouchers and sales of supplies through influence or contacts. While the grand jury does not regard these charges as equivalent to a general indictment of the WPA, it nevertheless assumes that graft is so all-pervasive as to indicate a "general laxity in the administration of public works," warranting a comprehensive inquiry.

To most people this will seem to be a very scathing general indictment of the WPA in New York City. And the gravity of the indictment is emphasized by the grand jury's assertion that information in its possession indicates "shocking official ignorance" of frauds perpetrated in the name of relief.

There is a small percentage of people in this country who are not certain they know exactly how a newspaper should be run. They are the ones who are running the newspapers.

"An organization to combat mother-in-law jokes has been formed in New York." Members of this organization probably think a mother-in-law is no joke.

Chilean Names

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In order that your readers may have a clear understanding of the Chilean system of nomenclature, I wish to correct your correspondent whose story of the terrible catastrophe appeared in The Post of January 27.

He referred repeatedly to the Chief Executive of Chile, Pedro Aguirre Cerda, as "President Cerda." Properly the President's surname is Aguirre, to which is added his mother's maiden surname, Cerda, thus following the usual procedure in Spanish countries. The method is different from that practiced in Spain, where the conjunction "y" (and) separates the paternal from the maternal name. There he would be Pedro Aguirre y Cerda, but in Chile, simply Pedro Aguirre Cerda.

By remembering this system, confusion regarding Chilean surnames will be avoided. The writer of your editorial, "Chile's Plight," should be commended for observing the rule; he properly styled the Chilean chief as President Aguirre.

The Ryan-Sheehy Tour

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may not be amiss for me to express my sense of appreciation for the splendid interview with Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of the Catholic University, written by Mr. Edward T. Folliard. The matter contained in this piece was interesting and important. It should do something to allay the fears of those who continually harp on nationalistic Spain as "a springboard" for Nazi or Fascist attacks on South America.

Dr. Sheehy is known as a sincere friend of democracy, complete religious liberty for Christians and Jews, and truth in the news. His testimony is particularly valuable because a number of Washington commentators (whose gossip fortunately does not enliven the columns of The Post) did their best to place a false interpretation upon the visits made by two distinguished educators to Latin American.

Socialism For Railroads

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Old-party editorial writers and politicians claim that Thomas C. Amlie, nominated to the Interstate Commerce Commission, has not the "proper qualifications" or "experience in transportation problems."

As the commission members now functioning have done nothing to solve the railroad problem in all these years, and as the House and Senate committees who have delved deeply into the problem have no adequate solution so far, what is it that requires an expert anyway? The owners of the railroads, with their experience in management, have no solution except Government loans, which have been tried in the past but produced no permanent results, merely stop-gap operation between private and public ownership.

Mr. Amlie has the only real solution. Senator Wheeler had the real solution years ago, but seems to have gotten into bad company the past few years! Social ownership (socialism) is still the only answer!

Lights For Pedestrians

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Henry P. Parrish's letter of January 23, which appeared in a recent issue of your paper, states he wonders how it would be possible to operate an "exclusive light" at street intersections for pedestrians, as suggested in the letter of another of your contributors.

A walk through the downtown shopping district along F or G streets, from Eleventh to Thirteenth streets, would satisfy this inquiry and incidentally enable the inquirer to note the disregard some motorists have for those "walk" lights designed to protect pedestrians from turning vehicles, especially when a traffic officer is not at hand.

The local director of traffic has admitted that to hold up vehicular traffic in all directions simultaneously at intersections to protect pedestrians from turning vehicles would seriously congest vehicular traffic. The plan has been tried elsewhere, notably in New York City, and abandoned as impractical.

The assertion that present traffic lights are adequate for pedestrian and driver alike is not sustained by observation or experience. The Traffic Bureau has announced that when money is available the lights at some points will be changed to afford more adequate protection for persons afoot, especially on Pennsylvania avenue at Eleventh and Thirteenth streets.

Other intersections could be named where traffic lights do not afford proper protection to pedestrians, especially at the circles. On M street northwest, for instance, eastbound traffic is held up by a red light in Thomas Circle while westbound traffic may enter M street at this point. Pedestrians must use their own judgment as to when it is safe to negotiate a crossing.

Regulations controlling pedestrians apparently are designed more for the purpose of relieving the driver from responsibility than they are to protect the pedestrian. Pedestrian traffic will be effectively controlled when vehicular traffic is so heavy that there is no gap in the flow of moving vehicles to permit a crossing afoot in safety on a red light.

The Peoples Lobby

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Philosophers are often supposed to be idle dreamers, yet in fact some of them have been highly practical and useful men of affairs. Among these have been Plato (the greatest one of all), Bacon, Voltaire, Balfour, Russell, Emerson and, right now in this country, John Dewey. Dr. Dewey is, or recently was, president of the People's Lobby.

We have business lobbies, financial lobbies, ecclesiastical lobbies, veterans' lobbies, and so forth. The People's Lobby works to improve conditions for the people in general. Its motto is, "We get and give the facts." Its office is in this city, but its members are all over the country. More people ought to be members of it.

Among the lobby's specialties are taxation, co-operation to reduce excessive costs, promotion of home ownership and better arrangements for international trading.

The Amlie Appointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial condemning Amlie's appointment to ICC is excellent.

Most every informed person knows how bad is the plight of rails. They also know that the New Deal has done nothing to cure that plight; actually, for political purposes, rail troubles have been allowed to get worse, and when rail owners sought to bring wages into line with rail income no less a personage than President Roosevelt threatened the operators with punishment if they dared cut wages of rail employes. A conference resulted, with the newspapers informing the country that wages would be maintained. President Roosevelt having promised aid for legislation in aid of the rails.

Part of the hardships that rails now labor under has been due to their regulation by ICC, and it would seem the logical thing to do, when the opportunity offered, to put men on the ICC that would show some favor for rail operators. Instead, the President (and the act itself indicates its purely political motive) appoints a lame duck, on record in his opposition to privately owned operation of rails! I ask those readers who are favorable to the President in the belief that he is a statesman rather than a politician if any more proof is needed as to his real motives toward private business? Sure he talks loud and long about giving aid to business, but in the final analysis actions speak louder than words.

HARRY AMBRUSTER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have neither political nor personal interest in the appointment of Mr. Amlie as Interstate Commerce Commissioner, but if a man is to be denied the right to be designated to hold public office and is called a communist because he believes in Government ownership of railroads, how long will it be before a man may be denied appointment as Postmaster General because he believes in Government ownership and operation of the postal system the greatest example of socialism in practice anywhere in the world? It functions for service and not for profit, which is the objective of socialism.

Moreover, what becomes of our boasted freedom of opinion?

J. H. HOLLAND.
Washington, Jan. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although I have been a reader of your paper for over ten years, I do not believe I have ever read a finer analysis of an explosive political situation that illustrates better an exposition of this principle in your columns than the sober, scholarly, factual analysis of Mr. Lindley's recent column on "The Case of Mr. Amlie." It should put the scaremongers to shame.

With your news columns roaring "Communist!" and your editorial saying, wholly unfit, here is a candid analysis of vigorous political differences that is refreshing.

The Post and Mr. Lindley are to be congratulated upon such reporting at a time when most of the columns are being devoted to the calling of silly names.

Hamburger Palace

IT WAS ONE of those brightly lighted places generally understood, by its own evaluation, to be a Hamburger Palace. As far as George could see the only thing palatial about it was the fact that its builders had been generous, both inside and out, with white tile. Well, white tile made it easy to keep clean. George sat at the counter, ordered "One and coffee," and watched the hamburger man slap a pat of ground meat onto the grill.

The hamburger man was a thin young fellow who wore a long white apron and a starched white cap. There was a professional air about him, as though he viewed the job of feeding people who couldn't afford even a cheap restaurant as a kind of calling. He flipped George's hamburger to its other side, sliced a roll and drew coffee into a thick procelain cup. As from long habit, he moved methodically, apparently oblivious to everyone in the place. But George, watching him, had a feeling that he was aware of them all as individuals.

A girl moved from the table where she sat with three other people over to the counter a few seats down from George. She had a round face and a pancake of a hat that was held on one side of her head by a velvet strap under her chin. She sat on the edge of her stool with one leg stretched out to the side, and George saw that part of the patent leather was missing from her high heel. Having served George, the hamburger man moved down toward the girl.

"Listen, Mac," she said.

"I'm listenin'," Mac said. So was everyone else.

"I want somebody to tease," she said.

Mac smiled and replaced the top on a mustard jar. "I tease easy," he said. He took up a cloth and began wiping the counter. The girl looked at him from under the pancake hat.

"You make me sick," she said.

The door opened and a man came in and sat beside George. Glancing briefly at him, George saw from his clothes that he was a workman. He ordered a cup of coffee, then went over to an electric phonograph and dropped a nickle in the slot. The thing began to play a swing tune record and under cover of it a number of new conversations sprang up in the room.

When the record stopped, the conversations fell again. The girl bought a package of chewing gum from Mac, folded one stick into a roll and put it in her mouth. In a minute George could hear her chewing. He lighted a cigarette because he didn't want to go. The workman audibly enjoyed his coffee and George thought if he hadn't played that record he could have had two cups.

The sounds from the street through the open windows made them all look up at once. George and the workman turned on their stools. Mac went up to the front window and the girl was among those who looked out the door. The sounds were of police motorcycles, of feet marching on asphalt, then slowing to mark time, and of voices directing the men in khaki. Squad after squad, company after company of men in khaki filled the street. George thought how strange it seemed to see soldiers marching in the streets of Washington and wondered how many other world capitals could feel that way.

"What is it, Mac?" the girl asked as if the sight of authority were always something to consider.

"Drill night," Mac answered.

"It's a good thing," an older woman said. "Keeps all them boys outa mischief."

"You ought to be out there with 'em, Mac," the girl said.

"Not me," Mac said. "I got a wife an' a baby an' a job. That'll keep any man busy."

The motors of the motorcycles snorted and raced, sped up and died down, and the slow shuffling sound became again the sound of marching feet. The voices barked, traffic at the intersection waited and the khaki columns moved off. Inside the Hamburger Palace those who had risen went back to their places.

Outwardly it was the same and yet it was different. The workman had finished his coffee and rose and went out. The girl stood a moment on the floor, then sat, not at the counter near Mac, but at the table where George had first seen her. Her bantering mood had gone, but her restlessness remained. The pancake hat sat at a resentful angle.

George got up and started the music machine. Mac was straightening up the shelves behind the counter. He had his back to the room and was as phlegmatic, as occupied with his job as when George had entered the place. For a moment George stood at the door, looking out into the street, aware that at that moment in many cities all over the country people were sitting and eating, drinking coffee from thick porcelain cups, in little sidewalk rooms of white tile. Generally they were people who could not afford or who preferred this to cheap restaurants, and into these Hamburger Palaces they brought their lives, their purposes and disappointments, much in the same way, he imagined, as people had gone to the taverns and coffee houses of centuries past.

Mooney's Beliefs

INASMUCH as Tom Mooney now represents himself as a leader, almost as the god, of American labor, he puts it up to the patriotic citizens for whom he presumes to speak to examine his character, methods and declared beliefs. There may be some among the Americans whom he would call his followers who would then take care to repudiate him. The latest suggestion that Mooney be judged by the company he keeps or that he be taken at his word on matters on which he has declared himself is immediately and violently denounced as "Red-baiting" and as the paid propaganda of Wall street and facism.

But in this connection it is important to remember that he himself is a skilled baiter and propagandist, that toil was not his principal occupation, even before he was sent to prison, and that in denouncing the Nazi-Fascist type of dictatorship he has failed to denounce the Russian kind as well.

INDEED, he has expressed admiration for Josef Stalin, and a compilation of his writings might move American workers who believe in unionism, but not in revolution, to withhold their credentials from him. Surely it would be no injustice to Mooney to give wide publicity to the beliefs and urgings which have appeared under his name, and any assertion to the contrary could only mean that it was desired to deceive American workers as to his true principles and intentions.

Mooney himself, in fact, should be glad to emphasize his inflexible policies again in a general restatement, which would be sure to receive wide publicity, and abide by the judgment of American labor on his aspiration to lead. As matters stand up to now, he simply takes it for granted that he represents American labor, including many conscious patriots, and the self-approval which is such a famous part of his personal character precludes any doubt of the validity of this assumption.

"The most respectful audience that any man ever addressed paid me the highest tribute ever given a human being," Mooney wrote in one message describing the parade which followed his release from San Quentin by a political decision of the American citizens of California—"homecoming celebration for me never before equaled in the whole history of the world."

AND, ALTHOUGH acknowledging the greatest tribute ever given a human being in celebration, the like of which the world had never known, Mooney predicted still higher honors for himself in later demonstrations. It may be noted that he did not speak of a celebration of a great triumph of justice which could not have happened in Russia, but of a tribute to himself—"the highest ever given a human being."

But that remarkable vanity of the individual man, while it instinctively compels comparison with expressions of unqualified self-praise contained in the orations of Duce and Fuehrer, might be dismissed as immaterial. A vain man may be a good man, and immodesty is neither un-American nor illegal, although it may be bad politics. But loyal American citizens who demand Americanism as the first qualification in their leaders and insist on their own definition of Americanism would examine Mooney's declared beliefs with care.

NOR CAN IT be held, although it will be savagely argued, that a scrutiny of Mooney's statements, by which he must stand or fall, is a trick of fascist propaganda. All public men aspiring to leadership are judged by their utterances on the issues, and it would not meet the challenge to cry "Red-baiting." In fact, that cry would suggest a willingness to concede that Mooney is a Red man and American labor might reject him.

Mooney's written comments and declarations constitute a large file. They should be edited, not corrected or modified, but gathered into an edition and placed in the hands of the loyal citizens as the platform of Tom Mooney.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

A LITTLE DUTCH BOY, almost 40 years ago, listened to the schoolmaster who, day after day, assured God of his faith that God would help the Boers to strike down England in South Africa. The boy grew up to be an international newspaper man, Pierre Van Paassen, author of "Days of Our Years" (Hillman-Curl, $3.50), which is the Book-of-the Month Club's February selection. But he never forgot those prayers, or the power of England. Long afterward, in Palestine and Ethiopia, and at the time of Munich, he remembered England and the Boer War.

Gorcum was a Calvinist town. It had its class contrasts and its hyprocrisies; it also had a sense of the rule of God, a lingering sense of the faith which had once made Holland and Switzerland, that every citizen was a God-conscious militant who would not hesitate to pit his convictions against the power of the state, the princes and the dictatorship. Long after he had given up his boyish plan to become a Lutheran minister, something of that ancient individualist faith and pride lingered in Mr. Van Paassen; he felt something kin to it in the proud Judaism of young pioneers whom he met in Palestine years later.

It was Van Paassen's destiny, however, to roam the world. His family came to Canada just before the World War; he studied at Toronto College, had a fantastic missionary experience in Alberta, whither he was sent because he knew "Austrian." But the Austrian immigrants of Alberta were Ruthenians speaking Slavonic, and the Dutch boy's knowledge of tongues was of small avail. He served in the Canadian army in France. Returning, he had the usual former soldier's experience of shifting jobs—telegraph operator, store clerk, streetcar conductor, newspaperman.

IN TORONTO'S Union Station in 1921 Van Paassen met two Catholic priests on their way back to Europe. One was German, one French; they had worked together in the interior of Borneo for 22 years, and only three months earlier had learned that their countries had been at war. That story made Van Paassen's reputation. Clark Howell called him to Atlanta; he began to write for a syndicate headed by the old New York Evening World.

He wrote, as if he believed it, the story of the Pope's attempt, in October, 1917, to stop the war by climbing into No Man's Land and appealing, in the name of Christ, to the men on both sides of the barbed wire . . . He went to Paris, and wrote about King Carol and his love nest for Magda Lupescu in Neuilly, and about Jimmy Walker's "wisecracks," which the newspapermen made up for him. And of Trebitsch-Lincoln, whose career—as Austrian Jew turned Catholic priest, who became first a member of the British Parliament, then a German spy, then a Buddhist lama—Mr. Van Paassen here makes even more glorious by adding a term as secretary to Leon Trotsky.

Old John Tennant, of the Evening World, liked Van Paassen's stuff and egged him on. "To what does Pola Negri attribute her lack of success in the American 'movies'?" the great editor cabled. "Probably to the fact that a black cat ran across the gangplank when she first set foot on American soil." Van Paassen cabled back without bothering Miss Negri: "Worth 5,000 words," was Tennant's implacable reply. Van Paassen studied black magic, and wrote his story.

He went to Beirut to see a casino opened by Pearl White in the deserted harem of a fugitive pasha; to Oberammergau, to report the stigmata on Therese Neumann's body; to Hungary, to investigate a false messiah; to the Vatican, to get the Pope to phone New York on his new gold telephone; to Egypt, to see Tut-ankh-amen's Tomb; to the battlefields of France, with a delegation of German pacifists—everywhere that an American editor, trained in the yellow Sunday school, sent him. He retells many of those wild, exotic tales in this book, and some of them are pretty tall. I like best his account of an interview with Marshal Lyautey, the pacifier of French North Africa, on the subject of Pilate's treatment of Jesus.

"I would not have waited till Jesus had infected the crowds in the capital with his seditious poison," said the marshal, according to Mr. Van Paassen. "I would have had Him up before the firing squad in his home province, up north in Galilee."

Mr. Van Paassen tells his stories well. There are a lot of them that I would like to believe; some of the most ghastly are more probable.

HE KNOCKED down a Nazi police officer in the Brown House in Munich, Mr. Van Paassen says, confessed having lent his passport to a refugee, was beaten up (several teeth knocked out), was thrown into Dachau concentration camp, and after 11 days was put across the border. He was attacked by semi-cannibalistic Africans in Ethiopia, and jailed by the Italians; in Palestine the Arabs fired at him with extremely bad aim, but almost got him with their daggers. Even in France Mr. Van Paassen ran into an extremely able ghost.

He crossed the Sahara Desert; he studied the harems of the Moslem lands; and in recent years, in Spain, Ethiopia and Palestine, with no John Tennant to dictate assignments, he reverted to his Calvinist heritage and began meditating upon the state of the world.

"Europe and the world," he asserts, "will in all likelihood have to pass through the phase of fascism," he says. "The old parliamentary institutions cannot be saved . . . But fascism carries in its bosom the seed of its own disintegration . . . The struggle that is coming is a struggle for man. In that struggle Christianity will triumph . . . It will be a new Christianity that comes up from the depths of the catacombs of suffering and sorrow. Its apostles will be the martyrs and saints of a new religion that will solve the elementary problems of human existence, the conquest of economic slavery and poverty and peace."

Maybe. At least that is as easy to believe as Mr. Van Paassen's story of how Schleicher was killed because he got wind of Hitler's plan to wipe out Paris on a summer night in 1934; how Mussolini, in a 2-hour conversation in Venice, dissuaded Hitler from his project; and how gratitude for this deliverance explained Laval's acquiescence in Mussolini's African conquests.

Hitler's Issue For The Coming Year: The Haves And The Have Nots

CHANCELLOR HITLER went a long way in his address on Monday toward clarifying the prospects for the coming year. He confirmed the conclusion, which was already indicated in the week after Munich, that his next major campaign would be directed not against Russia but against the British Empire primarily and against the French Empire incidentally. This was certain to be his choice. Great strategist that he is, Hitler was bound to see that he could not expand to the east, through Poland and the Danubian states to the Ukraine, as long as the Anglo-French military and naval power was intact behind him. That was the mistake of the Kaiser in 1917 when he pushed into Russia after the separate peace of Brest-Litovsk before reaching a decision on the western front. And Hitler is not repeating that mistake.

But being a realist, Hitler is under no illusions about how formidable an undertaking it is to offer a direct armed challenge to the Anglo-French combination. Weak as they were on the issue of reaching out into central Europe to protect their outlying positions in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, they are from a military point of view invincible in defending themselves. That is why "the crisis" of the past few weeks has been exaggerated by those who thought that there was immediate danger of war.

War Is Precluded For the Time Being

WAR IS PRECLUDED for the time being by the fact that the defensive military position of the Anglo-French is very much superior to the striking power of the Rome-Berlin axis. What makes the Anglo-French position too strong to be challenged directly is, first, that the defense is inherently easier, but, above all, that the two nations are united in their will to resist. Their capacity to resist has indubitably been strengthened by the moral support which they have had from public opinion in the United States.

So, though there have been alarms and anxieties throughout the world in the past month, a real crisis involving the risks of a general war has not developed.

A great crisis will not and cannot develop as long as there is maintained as much unity of attitude among the western nations as they have achieved since Munich. This is the only guaranty of peace that the world has, and the question is whether in the months to come, say between now and September, the will to resist can be divided or can be maintained. We shall see what we shall see. The campaign which Hitler inaugurated on Monday is designed to prepare a situation in which Britain and France become separated, each suspecting the other of trying to buy peace at the expense of the other, in which America is induced to adopt a kind of neutrality which would be in effect a blockade against both France and England. Then, and then only, if France and Britain are isolated and internally divided, will the moment have come for a real show of force to bring the one or the other to another Munich.

Self-Determination Theme at Munich

THE THEME of the campaign which culminated at Munich was an appeal to the right of self-determination. The democracies were persuaded that they had no right to resist by force the incorporation in the German Reich of the Sudeten Germans. The theme of this campaign is an appeal to the anti-imperialism of the western nations: "How can a just and sensible share in the world's wealth be assured to all great nations?" said Hitler. "For surely no one can seriously assume that, as in the case of Germany, a mass of 80,000,000 intelligent persons can . . . be forced to remain passive forever by having some ridiculous legal title, based solely on former acts of force, held up before them."

We shall hear much more of this thesis in the months to come. For on the basis of this thesis Hitler means to persuade the western world that resistance to his claims and to Mussolini's is morally wrong and that any kind of unity in opposition means that the democracies would be pulling the imperial chestnuts of foreign imperialists out of the fire.

Now there is no doubt that there is a colonial question, that Europe can never be at peace until, through emigration and through the expansion of foreign trade, the overcrowded regions of the continent find an outlet in the uncrowded regions of the earth. Hitler is speaking the truth when he says that any German statesman would be bound to raise the question. But he is wrong, I believe, in assuming that the colonial question is insoluble except by the threat of force.

Evidence of History Against Hitler

THE EVIDENCE from the history of imperialism in the nineteenth century is clearly against him. He himself points out, for example, that the German colonial empire "was acquired in peace through treaty and by purchase:" the German colonies in Africa were acquired, as a matter of fact, at a time when Germany had no navy and when Great Britain had undisputed command of the seas. Even more striking are the cases of the small powers like Holland and Belgium which acquired or held substantial colonial empires though they had no military force whatever. Moreover, it should be remembered that the French Empire was acquired at a time when Anglo-French relations were very bad, and when the British power was unmistakably greater than the French. The plain fact of the matter is that force has not been the only basis of the legal title to the colonial empires.

BUT WHAT is even more significant, because it throws light on the only possible solution of the question in the long run, is that the old empires have been in process of rapid liquidation during the past 50 years. The British areas of the world's surface, for example, comprise a little more than 12,000,000 square miles. But of this "empire" the self-governing dominions, in all essential respects independent nations, control nearly two-thirds. The area nominally controlled from London is a little over 4,000,000 square miles, and of this about half is India which is very near to virtual independence. The other half of what is really the British Empire is in Africa, and of the African empire, Egypt is very near to independence.

The truth of the matter is that western imperialism is self-liquidating because the spread of democratic ideas makes it impossible for democracies to deny self-government in their empires. The British experience is the most striking as it is the most important. But our own confirms it. We have had a colonial empire, and if force were the criterion, we could have had a much greater one. But the whole course of our policy in the past generation has been to get out of the business of imperialism.

THE REAL COLONIAL question, as it is presented by the Germans, Italians, and Japanese, is whether the liquidation of colonial empires is to be carried out to its logical conclusion, or whether new empires based on conquest are to be founded. Specifically, the issue is this: The tendency of the democracies is to retire from imperialism by granting self-government to their colonies and an open door to commerce. This tendency could be hastened by negotiation, and a true settlement of the colonial question would have been reached when the backward parts of Africa, which are as yet incapable of self-government, were under international tutelage with equal opportunity to all the advanced nations. This is the solution which history is preparing, and it is the solution which alone promises to put an end to the rivalry of imperialists.

The other solution, which is what the Germans, the Italians, and the Japanese are now seeking, looks not to the liquidation of empire but to a redistribution of empire. That is a radically different thing. For that will accentuate the armed rivalries of empire rather than remove the rivalry. The extension of Japanese imperialism to the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies, of Italian on the shores of the Mediterranean, and of German into Africa is bound to mean, not only a setback to the movement for self-government and the open door but to establish new frontiers of rivalry and new focal points of military and naval antagonism all over the world.

A TRUE SETTLEMENT would mean that the Haves gave up their rapidly waning monopolistic position, not that the Have Nots replaced them as monopolists with a much more intense form of imperialism. Whether such a settlement is possible with highly militarized dictatorships is the question that will be tested out in the period we are entering.

For if the European democracies which have the empires are able to resist intimidation long enough and certainly enough, they may eventually reach the position where a constructive solution becomes possible. But if their resistance disintegrates, we shall get not a solution of the colonial question but a new imperialism that is more dangerous to the world's order than the one which now exists.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Hot Dog Now Putting On The Dog

They held a "preview" of hot dogs and hamburgers at the New York's World Fair the other day, and if that isn't something new in swank, you get three more guesses. It was held for the benefit of the press and some selected guests, the idea being to show to what extent the frankfurter and the hamburger sandwich can be glorified if one really is determined enough.

The event was really a formal showing of the Hot Dog of Tomorrow and its proper sphere in the World of Tomorrow.

If you had any idea that the frankfurter and roll, together with the hamburger sandwich, were common foodstuffs capable of no style or swank, you should have seen what the World's Fair is doing to 'em.

The preview included a showing of what was called "Frank Swanks," or 57 ways to prepare a frankfurter. One concoction was the "Frankfurter Quail," and consisted of a dog served with cheese and bacon. Then there was the Hamburger World's Fair, the meat wrapped around a pickled onion and dipped into egg batter and corn flakes and fried brown.

If that isn't giving glamour to a hamburger and onion, what is?

The fried, boiled, broiled, steamed and fricasseed frankfurter were also shown and they even had new models in rolls. Nothing looked like its old self except the mustard.

When a World Fair goes to all this trouble to publicize hot dogs and hamburgers you get some idea of the place of prominence they have come to occupy in our national life. The hot dog has just about become Edible No. 1, with the "catmeat and onion" a close second.

The hot dog really got its real start at baseball parks, where it almost replaced the peanut, but it was not until the New Deal came into power that it found real recognition in a big way. President Roosevelt will go down into history as the man who gave the hot dog its first boost. He revealed himself as a genuine hot-dog addict. Stories were sent out about his appetite for the frankfurter and roll, and the newsreels even had pictures of him tackling them.

Facing Realities

The Problems Ahead

MANY OF OUR people shortly must show their capacity to endure disillusionment and face reality. I have heard a wise man say that no person is fully equipped for life until he has had the experience of conducting a strategic retreat. And disillusionment calls for a kind of retreat, a retreat of the spirit.

There are several disillusionments ahead of various groups among us. Disillusionment of farmers over President Roosevelt's attempt to raise the prices of farm crops—"if we cannot do it one way, we will do it another; do it we will." Today prices of crops are lower than when Mr. Roosevelt made that confident declaration over five years ago. Disillusionment over the hope held out that business recovery would come—"we are planning it that way." Disillusionment over continued unemployment — we have as many unemployed today as when Mr. Roosevelt, in the latter part of 1938, held out the expectation of ending it. No matter what the cause of these disappointments, it is America and each of us that must face them and find a way out of them.

Roosevelt Realist In Foreign Affairs

FOR ONE GROUP of disillusionments, Mr. Roosevelt is not responsible. In the field of foreign relations Mr. Roosevelt has been more a realist than the mass of the people have been. Some thought we could find a magic way of remaining at peace. They thought we could pass a resolution of Congress, a formula for neutrality, and then sleep in peace, secure against involvement in war—close our eyes, say "abracadabra," and enjoy perpetual peace. But preserving peace, staying out of war, is like living life—it is meeting new situations from day to day, exercising judgment about new conditions that arise, judgments which to some extent involve making choice between two possible courses.

Right now, some difficult problems must be met, and whatever way we answer them a series of consequences will follow. France is buying airplanes from American manufacturers. That is all right. It is being done with some kind of sanction from our Government. That is right, too. Private manufacturers of war material should co-operate with the government—should not sell except where the government is willing they should sell. That way, voluntary co-operation is more flexible and more useful than rigid policy laid down in detail by statute.

BUT AT THE SAME time we sell planes to France, we refrain from selling planes to Japan. And suppose Germany or Italy should want to buy planes from American manufacturers. Would our Government refrain in these cases also? That is a question we should be willing to look in the face.

Again, France would hardly want to buy planes from American manufacturers. Would our Government refrain in these cases also? That is a question we should be willing to look in the face.

France Would Want Continuous Sales

Again, France would hardly want to buy planes from American makers if she knew that the moment a war is actually on, the shipments of airplanes would cease. For France or Great Britain to depend on America for a supply of airplanes, and then find, as soon as war actually breaks out, that she can get no duplicates or spare parts for repairs, would not be prudent. But selling planes to a country actually at war is different from selling to a country at peace. Have we made up our minds yet about what we would do if actual war broke out between England and France and, on the other hand, Germany and Italy?

Mexico expropriated oil fields owned by American corporations. "Expropriated" is a diplomatic word. What Mexico actually did was confiscate the oil fields. Hardly any well-informed person expects that Mexico voluntarily will either pay for the fields or return them to their American owners. So long as it was just a seizure of the property of American corporations we did not pay much attention to it, not as much as we should have. We had a "good neighbor" policy toward Mexico which forbade us to do anything rough.

BUT NOW WE HEAR that Mexico takes the oil from those wells and barters it at a low price to Germany. In return, Germany barters goods to Mexico, likewise at a low price. Mexico then takes the German goods and sells them to South America at a price that our American manfacturers cannot meet. Thus there is facilitated that German infiltration of trade into South America, against which we have a national policy. And with infiltration by German trade goes infiltration by Nazi propaganda, about which, likewise, we are seriously concerned.

About all these problems—of neutrality, peace and defense of the American system of society and government—we must make up our minds. We must do more than that. A definite making up of our minds will help and will go a long way. But it will not go the whole way. These are continuing problems. They present new emergencies from day to day. We must meet them. There is no safety in closing our eyes to them. There is no magic formula that will keep us safe. Reality will have its way, let man dream what he may.

We're On The List

By Barnet Nover

America Has Been A Perpetual Challenge To Power Of Europe's Rulers

FROM THE VERY beginning of its history, the United States has been the great alternative to the systems of government prevalent on the continent of Europe. That was true when Europe was largely a congery of more or less despotic monarchies. It is even more true today with that continent dominated by totalitarian dictators.

That fact meant a great deal to the Europe and the Europeans of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; it meant a good deal less to us. We were busy exploiting a rich continent. Our eyes were turned west. We wanted only to be let alone, to live in our own lives, to carry on our great democratic experiment without hindrance or interference.

Only when, as at the time of the Holy Alliance, the despots of Europe threatened to assert their authority on this side of the ocean did we become alarmed over developments taking place overseas. But from 1823 on, in the shelter of the Monroe Doctrine, Europe's balance of power and the British fleet, we lived so securely within our borders that generation after generation grew up happy in the belief that no harm could come to us from abroad.

FOR EUROPE America was the alternative. That meant two things. To the rulers this country was a perpetual challenge because, to those they ruled, it represented a system they wanted established within their own borders.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the unwitting influence of the United States in European affairs during the long period from the American Revolution to the present. Undoubtedly the example we set helped light the fuse that exploded in France in 1789. Throughout the nineteenth century the success of the United States was a steady inspiration to all those in the Old World who yearned for democracy. And the fact that each vessel returning from America brought letters from friends and relatives telling of the political freedom, social equality and economic opportunity they enjoyed here helped increase the ferment in Europe.

IT WAS NOT merely because of economic factors that, during the time of our Civil War, the ruling classes of Europe watched with eager anticipation the imminent break-up of the United States. The American experiment in democracy, they were persuaded, was about to end.

On the other hand, the sympathy of the masses of Europe, insofar as they could express it, was with the Union. That was most clearly brought out in England. Starving though they were because the factories in which they worked had been forced to close down because of a shortage of cotton from the South, the workers of Lancashire supported Lincoln and what he stood for.

They, too, saw this Nation as a Nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," and they, too, fervently prayed that the United States should have a "new birth of freedom and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

And there is probably more than a coincidence that two years after our Civil War ended, England took a long step forward on the road to real democracy. Indeed, in the decade after 1865 democracy in Europe made greater strides than in the entire generation that had preceded it.

THE UNITED STATES again is the great alternative. The democracies of Europe appear to have entered a twilight state. They offer no real challenge to the dictatorships of Europe, nor does Communist Russia. The United States does. And it does so principally by being what it is, a functioning democracy.

We have not solved all the grave problems that face us. We continue to have want in the midst of plenty. The American scene is far from idyllic in many of its particulars. The fact remains that despite the crises through which we have passed and are passing, we have not ceased being a democracy. And insofar as we help make democracy work better, the challenge we present to the dictators becomes more and more formidable.

They understand this fact. That is why the newspapers of the totalitarian states are full of unpleasant reports as to what is taking place on this side of the water. That is why our unemployment problem, serious as it is, is exaggerated beyond recognition. And that is why, so far as they can, the dictators seek to undermine our institutions, divide our people, break down our morale.

When they talk of bolshevism, it is not Russia they have in mind. Russia has long ceased being a threat to them. It has withdrawn within its own vast borders: and the Comintern, against which the dictators ostentatiously unite, is a hollow shell. The enemy they have in mind is democracy. And the most powerful of all democracies is the United States. The United States represents in the eyes of their own regimented peoples the kind of a world they would like to live in, a land where the freedom they lost survives and flourishes. It is this image in the minds and hearts of those they rule that the new rulers of Europe want to extirpate and with the image, if possible, the actuality.

In the past the American people could safely be oblivious to the envy and hatred felt for our democracy by the autocrats of the Old World. To do so now would be suicidal; to refrain from defensive measures at home and abroad shortsighted. No more now than in Lincoln's day can the world exist half slave and half free.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Social Alliances Spoiled by Interfering Mother, Girl Asks How to Master Situation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am appealing to you to help me extricate myself from a morass of human relationships. Here is a thumbnail sketch of my background: Two college degrees and enjoy congenial professional work. Lovely home from esthetic standpoint, but unhappy because of interfering mother. She is morbid by nature and brought me up to be like her. But beginning with college days, I have overcome an inferiority complex (combination of shyness and snobbishness) and have become cheerful and well liked. I am considered pretty, gay and good company, as I dance and do any sport fairly well.

A friend of mine, whom I had not seen for ten years until the other day, stated he did not recognize me at first because I had "grown so charming and so pretty." I am beginning to get a foothold in my profession, but do not make enough money to support myself apart from the family. Besides, I really prefer my home as a background.

Now, as to men: There are any number and always have been a few on my trail. One—let's call him A.—has two college degrees and is in love with me. Has not yet established himself in the position he wants. Is small and delicate looking. His appearance seems unimportant after knowing him a short time. He is generous, considerate, unselfish, suffers from same sort of inferiority complex I overcame and is beginning to come out of it. Naturally, I sympathize. Intellectually, he is stimulating, and recently I have seen more of him than of other men, partly due to his persistence and partly because he has needed friendship following a recent bereavement. He demands nothing of me, does not pin me down and I have given him no pledge of any kind.

There is another man. I'll call him B. He has two college degrees, and a good position in the same profession as mine. After long and cautious friendship of two years' duration, I now see him two or three times a week. We dance, dine, play bridge, golf, skate, go on weekends and generally enjoy each other's company. He is tall and nice looking. Apparently his interest in me is unromantic, although on rare occasions his reserve seems to break down and he shows definite signs of affection. He seemes to be a fine man; perhaps a little selfish. Then there are other men. For instance, I dated two besides A the past week, and had invitations from two more.

This is the trouble: Mother likes B but not A. Refuses to appear when latter calls and recently remarked she would leave Washington if I did not stop seeing him. She says he is "repulsive" to her; that she doesn't want him in the same house; that I don't know how to make decent friends; that I have few good ones. She makes fun of those I have. I retort that I consider myself fortunate to have those few, that one cannot expect too much in this world, and that she fails to recognize the intrinsic worth of the individual. Mother would like me to marry B and seems to hold me to blame that he hasn't proposed.

Here are my questions: How can I manage this family situation? How keep mother from interfering in my friendships? (She understands I am not promised to A; but this is not enough. She doesn't want him around the house). How can I learn the state of B's heart? (A girl whom I don't trust tells me that he is in love with someone else, far away. But how account for his constant attentions?) Is there any feasible way I can draw him out, without seeming aggressive? I am not in love with him, as yet, and do not know the possibilities of the friendship. Sincerely,

CAREER WOMAN.

Reading the Record

DEAR CAREER WOMAN: So long as you continue to live with your mother, you haven't a ghost of a chance of protecting your friendships from her interference. Because she is so inhibited, emotionally (morbid," as you say), she is trying to find vicarious release for her pent-up dreams through you, and she can no more resist the temptation to lay hands on your life—so long as you are within reach of her immediate influence—than a hungry kitten could resist the temptation to lap up an adjacent saucer of cream.

Her artless admission that A is "'repulsive' to her," shows plainly that she is 'projecting herself into the role which you occupy in his life; that she is thinking of and reacting to him as though he were her suitor, instead of appraising him as a potential son-in-law. Her more favorable reaction to B is similarly inspired. The record shows that, insidiously and involuntarily, she casts a blighting spell on your personality, simply because she hasn't the wisdom to let you be yourself; to leave you free to make a personally satisfactory adjustment to things as they are in a none-too-perfect world. The record shows, also, that only by withdrawing from the sphere of her influence can you hope to bring sound common sense to bear upon your own inalienably intimate affairs.

Not until you were (away) at college, in your fairly recent past, were you able to break the constricting mold into which she had cast your personality as a child; and if you are to hold this hard-won ground and make further progress toward wholesome and happy self-development, you must, in my opinion, establish a permanent barrier of social distance between your life and hers.

It has been my observation that daughters of insistently (however delicately) maneuvering mothers (mothers who take a zealot's interest in everything that concerns or involves said daughters) all too often wind up married to the wrong man—if married at all. Such mothers have a fateful faculty for frightening away the essentially suitable man (supposing he dares show his face on the scene at all), thus leaving the daughter in the unenviable position of having to make the best of what, if anything, remains.

Thus, I am inclined to attribute the present indeterminate nature of your relationship with B to your mother's intense preoccupation with the (from her standpoint, highly desirable) possibility of your marrying him. Subconsciously, if not consciously, he senses that some sort of net is being spread for him, and so he walks with a caution that is, in all probability, at curious variance with his real feelings in the matter; or, perhaps, at what his real feelings would be, if permitted to develop free from that inner repression, on his part, which is an instinctive salute to, and protective reaction against, the insidious overt pressure which her emotional attitude exerts.

Had your friendship with him bloomed under different auspices, it is entirely possible that you would have had the coveted proposal from him ere now, but so long as your mother's personality and emotional attitudes continue to intrude upon, to color and influence, the association, it probably will continue in its present stalemate. I don't think there is a single move, overt or covert, that you can make in his direction—toward "learning the state of his heart," or "drawing him out"—or on—that would make the situation any happier, for you. I think such maneuvers would only scare him away.

If you are determined to bring matters to a showdown; to learn once and for all just how much he cares for you and what his intentions are—there is only one way to do it. And that is by giving him what is known as the 'cold shoulder;" by suddenly, mystifyingly, consistently and deliberately declining his repeated invitations. Many a girl has won a proposal from an erstwhile indecisive of seemingly indifferent suitor by showing a determined disposition to waste no more time on him.

Witty Talk Wins Friends

LUCKY JEAN, thinks Betty, struggling into her wrap. But it's natural for Bob to think of Jean first when assisting the girls. She says such charming, gracious things, it's a pleasure to do things for her.

"So thoughtful of you to send me gardenias," she says to Bob when he arrives to take her to the dance. She greets her hostess with "it was so nice of you to ask me." When her partners thank her for a dance she smiles: "I enjoyed it too."

It's simple to give such a delightful friendly impression when you have a store of gracious colorful words.

Invited to dinner? Accept enthusiastically with "I'll be so glad to come." Refuse if you must with a regretful "What a shame, I simply can't make it."

Or are you pondering how to begin a business interview? Smooth to say, "I was told you have an opening in the sales department." Leave with a bright "The talk has been so interesting."

Send 15c in coin for our booklet, "1,500 Useful Phrases," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Seraphim Chiffon for Dancing

One of the most graceful of the midwinter dance frocks is the wisp of chiffon, above. Although Schiaparelli designed this white chiffon, her needle was in the lighter mood, for she has achieved a dreamy, moody effect, unlike her usual more barbaric inspirations. Gold nail heads encrust the high girdled waist, ending in bodice scrolls to accent the high, draped bustline. Pure Grecian fluidity is this, in the manner of Polynesian sculptors. This gown was prominent at a local fashion showing held recently at the Shoreham Hotel

Wine Is One of the Best Digestants for Persons of 60

REGULATION of the diet in the elderly is more important than at any other period of life, except infancy. And it is even harder than in infancy because habit fights every attempt to make changes. There are two classes of old people who are especially hard to handle. Because the senses of taste and smell are blunted, some of them crave highly seasoned, rich food. They almost invariably suffer from their indulgences because the appetite is way ahead of the capacity of the digestive system to take care of their preferments.

The old people of today were brought up at a time when food was simpler and coarser and less varied. Some stick tenaciously to the habits of their youth and refuse to accept any of the great number of new and varied foods which are put on the maket so inexpensively today.

Hard on the Old

The doctrine that roughage and a coarse diet will relieve constipation may be all right for the middle-aged, but it is a very bad doctrine for the aged. Constipation is a regular feature of the latter decades of life, but here roughage is not indicated.

There is a very good reason for the constipation of old age. The intestinal walls become thinned out and a pouching in the lower part of the large intestine—the colonic pouch—is a regular finding in people above 70. This pouch catches food and causes stasis and gives the impression of an accumulation in the intestines. These sensations the patient tries to relieve by more and more, and stronger and stronger cathartics. This tendency must be resisted. An occasional enema is much more satisfactory than a cathartic by mouth. Stones often form in these pouches and have to be removed mechanically.

If a cathartic is to be used for old people, the best is cascara, which should not be taken more than once every other day.

Soft Foods

This being the main difficulty, the diet of the aged should consist of soft foods, such as well cooked meats, pureed vegetables, fruit juices, milk, custards, eggs, toast, etc. Peas, beans, cabbage, cucumbers and tomatoes usually cause gas and bloating.

"Wine is the milk of the aged," and one of the best digestants after the age of 60 is a glass of sherry or port wine with meals. These no not affect the stomach and seem to give strength.

Old Dr. George Cheyne used to say that we should go out of life as we came in—on a diet of milk. This opinion, however, is 300 years old, and most modern specialists in diseases of old age believe that a glass or two of milk a day, along with other food, is as much as can be tolerated.

Overeating Is Reason for Obesity, Physician Declares, Discounting Glandular Excuses; Compares Gorging to Abuse of Alcohol

PROBABLY the world's keenest psychologists are the doctors who deal with patients who want to reduce. At least, that is the conviction gained from a perusal of the report of Dr. Frank A. Evans, Pittsburgh physician, in "Transactions of the Association of American Physicians" for 1938.

Dr. Evans is considered a leading authority on the treatment of obesity, and studies over a period of years have equipped him with all the arguments that would induce one overweight to stick to a diet. If you feel you lack the will power to go on a diet or to stay on one, you might well try some of his psychology on yourself.

Overeating, this authority explains, is simply "gustatory sensualism," and overindulgence in food is comparable to the abuse of alcohol. Apparently the most difficult decision the overweight has to make is to give up the fun of eating! The actual craving for food, Dr. Evans assures us, is lost in two or three days, but the memory lingers on and is a temptation to overeat.

It Has to Be Swallowed

Perhaps you think your trouble is glandular. Dr. Evans says that many obese people sincerely believe they are not large eaters and look with hope and longing for some glandular difficulty. Overweight, however, is tangible evidence that you have been overeating and Dr. Evans would soon have you realize that the material which makes fat is not rubbed on the skin, does not enter through the eyes, nor through the ears; it had to be swallowed.

If you have tried dieting before and have given up because of the depressing weakness and listlessness which accompanied your weight loss, all the doctor would ask of you is this: Give it a trial for two weeks or, if you prefer, for the popular 18-day period. By the end of that short time it has been his experience that the reducer is usually feeling so much better on her well-planned diet than even when she was overeating that her troubles are practically over.

Woman Lost 101 Pounds

And if you were new to dieting and you weighed 190 pounds when you should weight 130, Dr. Evans would explain tactfully that you were made up of 130 pounds of your own charming self and of 60 pounds of dead, inert fat. The diet prescribed for you would afford an ample supply of the essential elements to take care of the 130 pounds, with no excess to be converted into more fat.

Dr. Evans has concluded that obese persons are perfectly capable of managing their diets at home, and the success of several cases certainly bears him out. One of the cases was that of a woman aged 55, who lost 101 pounds. A man aged 50 lost 111 pounds, and four of the patients lost more than 50 pounds each.

The Gentler Sex

(A Housewife's Soliloquy.)

I

After all, I am asking so very little of life,
Compared to what so many people have; for instance,
I would never seek for fame or even riches,
Nor for my son the Presidency (though I would not decline it)
Nor would I want to be made soft by luxury,

II

But I should only like to face the future with tranquillity,
To know on getting old that I should never be a burden
On others' hands; but go with self-respecting independence
Unto the end of life on fruit of my own labors,
And not on any old folk's dole, or children's handouts,

III

If I could have a little spot somewhere, secluded,
A modest house—but certainly one with plumbing,
A garden, flowers and a few fresh vegetables,
A motor car—a Ford would do, but with no deferred payments,
A dog, a cat, perhaps a cow, a horse to ride on clear fall days,
And lots of sun, and rustling trees and wide stretch of horizon.

IV

I would not even ask an income of much proportion,
Only enough to keep us two and educate our children,
Give them a little start in life, perhaps some lifts
Over the hard places; and enough to put some savings by
For future days, and to give with generous spirit

V

Nor would I ask for useless lazy days of loafing,
I'd want them full, and yet enough of leisure
To read, to walk, to think, to view the world around me
In detached quietude, and do all the things I want to.
Surely there is that much for me—for everyone—without this battle

VI

A simple life—a place to live, enough to eat,
Some books, some friends, a radio, some modern conveniences,
Clothes with some beauty and some style, yet not expensive,
Freedom from fear of prowling wolves; escape from surging maelstroms
Of life's trifles; a snug retreat from life, that's all I ask; and yet,
Why is it that I've never yet encountered one who's found it?

Policewoman 'Likes' Humans

By the Associated Press.

New York.—The life of a policewoman in strenuous.

Adelaide Knowles, who recently took the Manhattan test, knows what it means.

Miss Knowles, who, according to her mother, has been "qualified and certified, but not yet notified," romps through exercises that would scare most women.

Again on the floor, legs spread as far apart as possible, bend over, touching the elbows to the floor in between the legs, keeping elbows in line with the heels.

What does Adelaide look for in police work?

"Dad's a doctor," she says. "Maybe that's how I got interested in marihuana cases. Anyway, I think I'd like to work on them for a while.

A Woman's New York

New York, Feb. 1.

IT IS widely and probably justly believed that the ladies have a great deal to do with dressing their men folks. When a group of leading merchant tailors get together, as they did at our Hotel Madison the other day, to discuss their plans of campaign for the coming season, much is said concerning the ladies' influence on the gents' wardrobe.

At this recent get-together, one of the principal speakers was Mr. Lucius Beebe, the comfortably off man-about - town who dabbles in journalism for a local newspaper. Since they were all boys together, Mr. Beebe had some interesting things to say. Of course, it was just one man's opinion, but this is a tidbit from Mr. Beebe's oration:

ALICE HUGHES

"It is my personal opinion that, as a generality, women are the worst enemies of the well-dressed man. Almost every man has, either secretly or patently, some feeling for clothes, and would indulge his fancy far more colorfully and lavishly than he now does were it not for the jealousy expressed in the form of sarcasm by the women he encounters . . . No woman can stand seeing a man as well or painstakingly dressed as herself . . . The thought that a man might own a costly mink overcoat while she possesses only a dyed lamb jacket will drive any woman to the witless fury and the insane hatred of the 'haves' that is characteristic of all "have nots."

Well, there you have some of Mr. Beebe, in essence. What do you make of it? No one denies that men are daring to dress more colorfully than their daddies, but I just cannot go with Comrade Beebe on this jealousy thing. Can you? For, after all, he can afford a mink coat!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—By the way, whatever did become of January, anyway?

I do wish you could see our handsome motorcycle policemen wearing their new fur bonnets! Boss Cop Valentine has just approved these blue moleskin affairs as standard equipment for the gallant men who scoot through the parks on motor bikes, and now I suppose our fanciest milliners will start styling them!

Nearly seven years ago the tenor singer, Gigli, squabbled with the Metropolitan Opera over finances, and left the old barn on Broadway! The other night he came home again to sing on that famous stage in "Aida"—and you should have seen the crowds! Of course, he's better in lyric rather than dramatic roles, but all the old Gigli fans, a little grayer or fatter or both, filled the big birdhouse with hollers of "Bravo."

While on the subject of high art, you may be glad to know that the Metropolitan Museum of Art, along with its Rembrandts and Hals, now boasts an original Walt Disney. Yes, some of the water colors from "Snow White" will be visible in those sacred halls this month . . . At last, Disney has made good! . . . The winter's vote for the costliest hat and muff—a little chinchilla set worn by Clara Whalen Gray. Yep—set her back $2,000. Such stuff should be hung in a gallery and guarded by G-boys.

Our sex came off first best in the tragic wreck of the flying boat Cavalier. Seaman Thomascheck of the rescue crew said: "The women were the strongest of the bunch when we found them. They kept cracking jokes all the time to keep up the spirit of the others. Maybe if they hadn't kept shouting and singing, we'd never have found them." All right, boys—who's a sissy now?

I saw Mrs. Irving Berlin lunching at the Ritz the other day wearing a chartreuse wool jacket, a black skirt, and a big black velvet hat, and mighty nice she looked, too.

The stores are beginning to remind us that St. Valentine's Day comes on the fourteenth, inst. From what I've so far noted, the valentines for 1939 will be old-fashioned—all lace and ribbons and red hearts and things. Well, why not? This is certainly a traditional feast, so let's be traditional about it!

Visitor From Chicago Feted at Luncheon

Mrs. Ernest Gruening Is Hostess in Georgetown Home; Party Honors Mrs. N. Raymond Clark, Here for Brief Stay

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

SLICES OF BUFFALO and a special rum punch were features of the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Ernest Gruening, wife of the director of the United States Territories and island possessions. Guest of honor for the event was Mrs. N. Raymond Clark, of Chicago, who will return to her home today after a brief visit with Dr. and Mrs. Gruening, who have been her friends for years

HOPE R. MILLER

I don't know when I've met anybody I liked better on short acquaintance than Mrs. Clark. Pretty and petite, with blue eyes and curly hair, she was trimly turned out in a frock of black transparent velvet with an embroidered white vestee, buttoned up the front and edged in narrow lace. In characteristic Washington fashion, someone who had just met her, asked what her husband did. "He's with Swift & Co.," she said. He is, indeed. In fact, he's vice president. But she didn't mention that.

Mrs. Gruening, who received her guests informally, wore a purple crepe dress, set off with a gold necklace. Spring cut flowers —snapdragons and gladioli—filled vases in the drawing and music rooms, and a bouquet of deep red roses, flanked by blue candles in silver holders, centered the dining room table where the buffet luncheon was served. Mrs. Worth Daniels and Miss Janet Brown assisted the hostess.

Guests, whose place cards were pictures of tropical scenes from Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Virgin Islands, were seated at quartet tables and lingered on until a scandalously late hour. The Gruening home in Georgetown is filled with objects of art, collected around the world, but especially featured are those from the United States Territories and islands.

The company seemed to divide itself into those who had tasted buffalo and those who hadn't. But everybody seemed to like it, as well as the rum punch, which had many taking a second, and even a third, glass. Among the guests were Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Anthony J. Dimond, Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Mrs. Karl Stefan, Mrs. Aubrey Williams, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Mrs. E. I. Lewis, Mrs. Edward Horgan, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Miss Bryan Battey, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. Robert Goodale, Mrs. William Kittle, Miss Marguerite Woolley and several others.

HERE AND THERE: Washington society is awaiting, somewhat impatiently, the arrival of the new Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope. Latest news received from him is to the effect he will arrive in New York March 16. His wife and teen-age son will remain in Finland, joining him here later. Rumors have gone the rounds that the handsome Mr. Procope, who made such a hit when he visited here last winter, is under 40. But that's all wrong. He was born in 1889. Guests invited by Mme. Constantin Fotitch wife of the Yugoslav Minister for tomorrow afternoon will have an opportunity to see sculptures of both the hostess and her daughter, Pola, done by Yucca Salamunich, Yugoslav artist. Several other samples of his work will also be on display... Years past it was aristocracy with its heritage of blue blood that made up society. But today it's all changed, according to an article by Inez Callaway Robb, in the March issue of a nationally known magazine. The author, who calls her piece "A Pair of White Gloves" lists three requirements for entrance into society's magic portals; money, passable table manners and a pair of white gloves . . . In my opinion, speaking from the standpoint of Washington society, official position, if it's high enough, also helps.

Mrs. Ickes Holds 2d 'At Home'

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, received yesterday afternoon at her second official "at home" of the season, at their estate, Headwater Farms, near Olney, Md.

The hostess greeted her guests at the door of the drawing room, and was gowned in a chartreuse green hostess gown, fashioned on princess lines with a slight train and long sleeves, widening into a bell shape at the wrist. The gown had a most unusual trim of appliqued laurel leaves, of a red gold shade that exactly matched Mrs. Ickes red-gold hair.

Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, Mrs. Michael Strauss and Mrs. Basil Manley. Mrs. Charles McReynolds, of Mount Victoria, Md., generally assisted during the afternoon. Mrs. McReynolds, who is a house guest for a few days of the Ickeses, makes her home at Blackfriars, one of the historic mansions of Maryland.

Noted here and there among the guests were Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who was in blue, with a flowered tiny hat; Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, jr., in navy blue, with matching accessories; Mrs. Edward Taylor, and Mrs. Aubrey Williams.

Mrs. Pepper was gowned smartly in black velvet, with a matching hat, feathered in magenta, and silver fox furs; Mrs. Nye in black with a fuchsia flowered toque and Mrs. McReynolds wore a hostess of shades of fuchsia and grape, with a suede girdle of soft green.

Also noted was Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Joseph Byrnes, jr., Mrs. Chester Bolton, who was gowned in blue with Persian lamb hat and coat; Mrs. W. F. Norrell, wife of the new representative from Arkansas; Mrs. Wade Kitchens and Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, of California.

Sant 'Orsolas Give Dinner

The guests were the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Ghiraldo; Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Commander and Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan, Mrs. Pettinos Blow, Mrs. Mondell Gregg, Ralph Snowden Hill and Clarence Hewes.

Bicycles Mean Bermuda

Commander and Mrs. Jennings B. Dow, of Washington, who, as you may have guessed from the bicycles, were snapped enjoying this favorite means of transportation in Bermuda. They have just returned to their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren. While at the resort they stopped at the Hotel Bermudiana

Dorothy Burch To Wed Feb. 14

Miss Dorothy Frances Burch, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Warren Burch, of Washington, has selected St. Valentine's Day, February 14, as the date of her marriage to Joseph King, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. King, of Washington and Lawrenceville, Pa. The ceremony will take place at 10 a. m., at St. Anne's Church, with the Rev. Maurice King officiating.

Miss Irma Burch will be maid of honor and only attendant for her sister, and Dr. Alan King will be best man. A reception at the Kennedy-Warren will follow the ceremony.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live at the Westchester.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dunn Leave for N. Y. Monday

Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn will leave for New York on Monday to meet their daughter, Countess Guy de Baillet-Latour, the former Miss Marianna Dunn. she will stay with them in Washington for a few days before going with Mrs. Dunn to Boca Grande, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will give a dinner on Saturday, February 11, for their daughter, who makes her home in Brussels.

To Fete Mrs. Barnett

Phillip A. Murkland will give a cocktail party on Sunday, February 12 for Mrs. George Barnett.

Mrs. Barry Hostess To Mrs. Baker And Mrs. Kirk

Mrs. David Barry entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her residence on Massachusetts avenue in honor of Maj. Barry's sister, Mrs. Wilder Baker, and Mrs. Alan Kirk.

Mrs. Baker, whose husband is at Yale University, is here for a visit. She is the former Miss Cora Barry, of Washington.

Mrs. Kirk's husband, Capt. Kirk, has recently been named Naval Attache at the United States Embassy in London. He has been on the West Coast with the fleet and does not plan to leave for his new post until the spring.

Capt. and Mrs. Kirk will entertain at dinner tomorrow night before the opening of the Junior League Follies at the Belasco Theater. Samuel Biddle will also be host at dinner before the show.

Elys Give Party At Pirate Den

Several dinner parties preceded the "preview" of the opening last night of Washington's newest night club, Capt. Don Dickerman's Pirates' Den, 3135 K street in Georgetown. In order to obtain a liquor license in the District, the owner of a night club must serve meals for three days, so the official opening of the den will not take place until Tuesday evening.

At a Dutch treat dinner organized by Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Ely, the guests included Representative Frank Osmers, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Seal, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart H. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Suydam and Mr. and Mrs. Russell M. Arundell.

Others at the party were Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. Mary Steele, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Schultz, Miss Marion Kerr, Mrs. W. O. Olcott, of New York; Mrs. Lyman Chalkley, Miss Lila Steele, Filbert Cranford, Straton Price, Washington Cleveland, Kenneth Stabler, Nathan Ash and William Dodd.

Society Gourmets Enjoy Hunt Dinner

The third in a series of hunt dinners took place last evening in the Pall Mall room of the Hotel Raleigh, with society gourmets feasting on gray-legged partridge and strawberries Romanoff.

Among those entertaining at the dinner were Dr. and Mrs. M. E. Twogood, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Boatwright, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Crowder, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. A. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. H. A. Macan, who had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Walter Karig, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schlesinger, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bachrach and Mr. and Mrs. Y. E. Booker.

U. S. Envoy to Be Feted

The Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle have cards out for a cocktail party on Tuesday, February 7, at 5:30 o'clock. Fay Allen Des Portes, United States Minister to Guatemala, will be guest of honor at the event.

Pearsons Give Theater Party

Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, brother and sister-in-law of Leon Pearson, whose new play "Washington Merry-Go-Round" opened at the Wardman Park Theater last night, entertained a large party at dinner and then took their guests to the performance.

Their guests included Willis Jerome Ballinger, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Jerome Williams, Harold Horan, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Casey, Miss Janet Brown, Miss Molly Flynn, Miss Bertha Joseph, and Mr. Pearson's brotherin-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood Fogg, who came from their home in Philadelphia for the performance.

Others who gave parties or had reservations for the opening night were Mr. and Mrs. John Garland Pollard, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler, Paul Bradbury Walter, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. E. K. Burlew, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick V. Rand, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger and Mr. and Mrs. Ganson Purcell.

The Woodrings Are Established At Shoreham

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring are established in their new apartment at the Shoreham. Although a few tasks remain to be done, the last of their belongings were moved there yesterday from 2300 S street.

The Shoreham isn't altogether a new home for Mrs. Woodring. As Helen Coolidge she shared the apartment there of her parents, former Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge.

Mrs. Rees McDuffie Is at the Shoreham

Mrs. Rees McDuffie, of Guilford, Conn., who arrived in Washington several days ago, has taken an apartment at the Shoreham for February and March. She was joined there yesterday by her sister, Mrs. Harry L. Clapp, of East Aurora, N. Y., who will remain with her for the duration of her stay.

Mrs. McDuffie has closed her summer home at Guilford and was in New York City before coming to Washington.

Hatches Vacationing At Ormond Beach, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Hatch are at the Hotel Ormond in Ormond Beach, Fla., for a few days.

Among other Washington residents vacationing in Florida are Dr. and Mrs. O. F. Blackwelder and Miss Grace Shorter, who are recent arrivals at the Venetian Hotel in Miami.

Mme. Cantacuzene Fetes Friends With 'At Home'

Madame Cantacuzene was "at home" yesterday afternoon to a small group of friends at the first of a series of similar "at homes" which she will continue throughout the season.

Nathan Straus Honors Murphy With Dinner

Justice Frankfurteer, LaGuardia Among Distinguished Guests

Big business got together with the New Deal last evening at the men's dinner which Nathan Straus, Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, gave in his apartment at the Shoreham in honor of Attorney General Frank Murphy.

Sharing the spotlight with former Gov. Murphy was Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, home city of the host. The distinguished guests also included Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senator James M. Mead, Representative Jed Johnson, Representative Henry B. Steagall, and Assistant Secretaries of State A. A. Berle, jr., and George S. Messersmith.

Businessmen present from New York were J. Stewart Baker, chairman of the board, Bank of Manhattan Co.; Rolland J. Hamilton, president of the American Radiator Co., and A. D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet.

Other guests were Richard C. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System; John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Stewart McDonald, administrator of the Federal Housing Administration; Lowell Mellett, executive director of the National Emergency Council; Francis Biddle, general counsel of the Joint Congressional Committee on Investigation of TVA; Prentiss L. Coonley, assistant to the chairman, Business Advisory Council for the Department of Commerce; Lyle C. Wilson, manager of the Washington Branch of the United Press Association, and Nathan Straus 3d, of New York, son of the host.

Henry Wallaces To Give Dinner On February 21

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace have issued invitations for a dinner on Tuesday evening, February 21.

Other dinners scheduled for later this month are that to be given by the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, on February 16, and the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot will give on February 23.

On Saturday evening of this week Mrs. Joseph Leiter and the Secretary of the Italian embassy and Countess Roberti will be among the hosts. Tonight the Naval Attache of the German embassy and Frau Witthoeft-Emden will give a dinner in their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Charlotte Nast Arrives for Visit

Mrs. Charlotte Brown Nast, who had a house in Washington several years ago, arrived yesterday to visit with Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr. She has been staying at Mepkin Plantation, the South Carolina plantation of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luce.

Last night Mrs. Nast was honored at a dinner given by Mrs. S. Kent Legare, and on Saturday Mr. and Mrs. George Howe will give a dinner in her honor.

Mrs. McLean Off For Palm Beach

In the group are Miss Evalyn McLean, Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne, jr., of New York, mother of Mrs. John R. McLean, Miss Eleanor Meem, Julian Gerard, jr., of New York, and John Galliher. The party will put up at the penthouse atop Whitehall.

Mrs. McLean's sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean and Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean, jr., have been at Palm Beach for several weeks, having taken a house there.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

AT DINNERS and cocktail parties it's currently difficult to tell a Sun Valley or St. Sauveur sunburn from one of the Palm Beach, Miami or Boca Grande variety. The general exodus North and South of the past few weeks is about evenly divided, with most of the younger set going in for winter sports.

DUDLEY HARMON

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good and the recent blizzards are causing great activity among ski enthusiasts from here to Montreal. "My dear, I just heard there are 12 feet in the Laurentians" and similar exclamations are being heard on all sides. One downtown restaurant is even showing colored movies of Sun Valley, with instructions as to how to do herringbones and stem Christies.

AMONG the Washingtonians who will head North shortly are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., who set off February 12 for Canada accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Spencer for a week or two of skiing.

Laura Tuckerman leaves today with St. Sauveur in Canada as her ultimate destination, though she will stop in Boston and Jackson, N. H., en route.. Several other members of Capital society are also busy making up parties for winter sports.

SECRETARY of State Cordell Hull, whose favorite way of entertaining foreign luminaries is to give them a men's luncheon, will be host at one on Saturday, February 11, for Oswaldo Aranha. The Brizilian Foreign Minister arrives here the preceding Thursday for trade talks with our Government, whose guest he will be. There will be several in the party and they will come on the Dutch liner Nieuw Amsterdam, which like so many other transatlantic liners, does South American cruise duty during the winter. Among those in the group will be Joao Carlos Miniz, who was here in 1934 with a Brazilian trade treaty group.

THE MYSTERY thickens about the purchaser of the Herbert Hoover home on S street. It is now quite definite however that the new owner is NOT the Republican National Committee, as previously rumored.

A CERTAIN couple in Georgetown thinks that sometimes "diplomatic immunity" can be carried too far. Their next door neighbor is an embassy official who, when some of their dinner guests accidentally parked their cars in front of his house one evening, called the police and had them towed away to the "car pound."

THE only member of Beverly Moffett's immediate family to be present at her wedding on Saturday, except her mother, will be Mrs. Elliot MacFarlane Moore, the former Janet Moffett, who will come from California for the event. The Navy is responsible for the absence of her three brothers from the ceremony—Ensign Charles is with the fleet in Southern waters, and Lieuts. William and George are at Long Beach.

ODDS AND ENDS: Emlen Knight Davies' wedding veil is being made in Belgium of exquisite Brussels lace. She will be married in the spring to Robert Grosjean of that country, and the ceremony will be performed at the home of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Oakington, near Havre de Grace . . . Edward Astley, who was in Washington a week or so ago is reported one of the three favorite beaux of Brena Frazier. Brenda goes to Nassau next week with her mother, and Mr. Astley, who is the son of Lord Hastings, will arrive there later in the season. . . . The enthusiasm with which "Set to Music" was greeted in New York has delighted the many Washington friends of Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, as the author of the show was rather worried about it when it opened here last month. At one Capital party in honor of Mr. Coward, a guest, seated near him, was discussing with some one else present a musicale he had attended earlier in the evening, and remarked "It was a little long and quite dull in spots." These must have been the only words of the conversation which Mr. Coward heard, for he suddenly interrupted what he was saying, and turning to the speaker, laughed, and said, "Excuse me, but those words are like a knife in my heart. Are you by any chance discussing 'Set to Music'?"

Fort to Honor Senate Group

Headed by Chairman Morris Sheppard, the Senate Military Affairs Committee will be guests of honor at the exhibition drill in the riding hall at Fort Myer tomorrow afternoon.

The visitors will receive the 17-gun military salute accorded a committee of Congress as it enters the post, and will be met by a special escort of honor from the machine gun troop, Tenth Calvary.

Members of the Military Affairs Committee who are expected to attend are, in addition to Senator Sheppard, Senator Warren R. Austin, Senator H. Styles Bridges, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Senator Sheridan Downey, Senator Chan Gurney, Senator Lister Hill, Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Senator Josh Lee, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Senator Ernest Lundeen, Senator Sherman Minton, Senator Gerald Nye, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Senator H. H. Schwartz, Senator Elbert D. Thomas and Senator Rufus C. Holman.

Conards Plan Dinner At Chevy Chase Club

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Conard are planning a dinner for Friday evening, February 17, at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Conard is directing a play to be given the evening of February 14 at the Washington Club as a birthday celebration for members of the Mary Washington chapter of the D. A. R.

Italy-America Society Meets

Signor Eugenio Bonardelli, counselor for emigration of the Italian Embassy, and Signora Bonardelli were among those present at the meeting of the Italy America Society last evening at the Mayflower.

Col. George B. McClellan, president of the society, introduced Mrs. Lydia van Hagan van Zandt, who gave a talk on the progress of Italian aviation from observations made on a recent two months' visit in Italy. "Italy Spreads Its Wings" was the subject of her address. Rhodes and the Port of Massawh, in Eritrea, were also described by Mrs. van Zandt.

A buffet supper followed the meeting of the society, which took place in the Chinese room of the hotel.

Among others present last evening were Lady Bradford Leslie, Miss Louise Hallett and her niece, Miss Kitty Astuto; Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Mrs. Goodloe Edgar, Miss Jennie Mason Gibbs, Mrs. Carl Casey, Miss Janet Richards and Mrs. Robert Love Taylor.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Nelson H. Darton, Mrs. Benjamin Hill, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Dr. and Mrs. George Trible, Capt. and Mrs. Fortunato Porotto, Miss Maude Davidge, Walter Davidge, Col. John P. Haines, Gen. John Phillip Hill and Col. Henry Parsons Erwin.

Johnson Says Defense Means Peace

War Department Aide Speaks on Federation Of Women's Clubs Arms Radio Forum

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"When those who live by the sword learn our defensive machinery is geared, they will think seriously before falling into temptation," Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, declared yesterday, speaking on the radio forum of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

He asserted the Administration's program was not an armament race but a significant step in defense and the Nation's only road to safety in a disordered world.

The Assistant Secretary of War was one of three speakers in the forum discussion of the question "To Arm or Not to Arm." Others were Norman Thomas and Prof. Harry Gideons of Columbia University. The broadcast was the first of the General Federation radio programs for which a "listening-in" party has been arranged by the radio chairman of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs. It was held at the General Federation headquarters with Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, national president, as hostess, and Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, radio chairman for the District Federation, presiding. Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, summarized the broadcast and led the discussion which followed. Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries also spoke.

Fantasies May Become Realities

The Assistant Secretary of War in his radio talk, declared that "to some people, the invasion of America may appear a mad dream, but even they will have to admit that the wild fantasies of yesterday have become realities of today.

"Because of our tremendous coastline on two oceans and because of our far flung possessions in distant seas, we need a navy second to none.

"Because of our responsibilities to the Western Hemisphere under the Monroe Doctrine, we need a powerful air corps."

Noting that President Roosevelt's message to Congress emphasized increased air power and modern equipment, Johnson said:

"The airplane has become a psychological factor that no nation can afford to ignore. Whether the fear for its prowess is justifiable or not is beside the point.

"Nations that have neglected its development become jittery in their dread of its use against them. They comb the world's markets, eager to purchase planes at almost any price.

"An adequate air force, ready at all times to resist invasion from the skies, will minimize hysteria in the face of danger. It will give America confidence to resist attack."

Norman Thomas challenged the statement that this Nation's military forces were inadequate, questioned the need for defense of our shores, and advocated a world economic conference. Prof. Gideans urged foresight which would equip this country to negotiate from the standpoint of strength rather than weakness. Mrs. Harold V. Mulligan, of New York, national radio chairman, presided at the broadcast.

Radio Audience Speaks for Defense

The discussion at General Federation headquarters was overwhelmingly on the side of a defense program. Those in the audience who favored other policies did not join in the discussion. The sentiment appeared to be wholly in line with the views of the Assistant Secretary of War, expressed in his radio talk.

Among those who attended the gathering at the General Federation headquarters were Gen. and Mrs. Fries, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Miss Marion Martin, of the Republican National Committee; Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of international relations for the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Frank H. Towner, chairman of national defense for the District of Columbia D. A. R.; Mrs. Edgar B. Merit, vice chairman of the radio committee; Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of the Clubwomen, G. F. W. C.; Frank B. Steele, secretary general of the Sons of the American Revolution; rMs. Steel, Arthur D. Call and Mrs. Robbin Evans.

"To Arm or Not to Arm" Is the Question

Wilson Alumni To Hold Dinner

The Washington Alumnae Club of Wilson College for Women at Chambersburg, Pa., tomorrow night will have a dinner at 6:30 at the A. A. U. W. quarters to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of the college. All alumnae in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland are planning to attend.

Erwin D. Canham, head of the Washington Bureau of the Christian Science Monitor will address the group on "Democracy and the Liberal Arts College."

The dinner also marks the opening of the campaign for $350,000 to build and endow a student-alumnae building. Mrs. Thomas D. McAvoy will tell about the campaign, and Miss Sue Stone will explain the special needs for such a building.

A national radio hook-up program over WJZ, 8:30-8:45, will bring an address by President Havens, of Wilson College, to thousands of alumnae who are attending similar dinners all over the country.

The Misses Mary and Elizabeth Wightman, of Washington, and Mrs. Thomas Alexander Mellon, of Pittsburgh, whose father was the first president of Wilson College, will be guests of honor. Mrs. Grace Peake Terry is in charge of arrangements.

Guadalupe Club Will Celebrate Signing of Treaty

The Guadalupe Club of 1848 will meet today at the Army and Navy Club for its annual luncheon in celebration of the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe. The guest speakers will be Gen. Hanson E. Eli, Col. Edward A. Ostermann, Col. Edmund L. Gruber and Comdr. Leland Lovette, U. S. N. and Mrs. Irving Fairweather, national president of the American War Mothers.

Mrs. Colden L. H. Ruggles, the president, will preside.

The club was formed in 1907 for the purpose of commemorating the history and character of the patriots as well as the events of the Mexican War. It now gives medals to the trainees of the Citizens Military Training Camps.

Sigma Phi Gamma Convenes Saturday

Washington's eight chapters of Sigma Phi Gamma international sorority will hold their annual province convention at Wardman Park Hotel Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday afternoon, there will be registration of members and delegates and that evening, at 7:30 the fiesta Espanol banquet will be held in the small ballroom, following which members will attend the Hawaiian holiday dance in the Continental room.

A business meeting will be held on Sunday morning, at 9:30 and, at 2 Sunday afternoon, the Shanghai luncheon will take place in the Dragon room.

The theme of the fiesta Espanol banquet will be entirely Spanish, all decorations, food, etc., while a South Seas motif will be carried out at the Hawaiian holiday dance.

As a special guest, the Washington chapters are entertaining Mrs. Dorothy Norton Stein, international president of the sorority, who will be here from Cleveland.

Each year, a different Washington chapter is given the honor of being hostess for the convention, and decides on the program, and parties to be held during the convention. This year, Epsilon Alpha chapter is acting hostess with Miss June Beaver, chairman of the convention.

President Names Mary Winslow To Inter-American Commission

Educator, Social Worker Chosen Representative on Women's Group In Accordance With Lima Resolution

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the appointment of Miss Mary Winslow, of Washington, as United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women. The appointment is in accordance with a resolution adopted at the Pan American Conference at Lima, Peru, which urged governments which as yet had not appointed their representatives to do so as soon as possible.

Miss Winslow has been active in educational and social work many years. She served for many years with the Department of Public Charities of New York City, during the World War was with the Council of National Defense and later was associated with the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor as economic analyst and director of special studies. She is an author and a recognized authority on problems of women. She has traveled extensively and is well acquainted with the other American republics.

The Inter-American Commission of Women was originally established as an autonomous body in accordance with a resolution of the Sixth International Conference of American States in Havana in 1928 to compile data on the civil and political rights of women. It presented reports to the Seventh Conference in Montevideo in 1933 and to the Eighth Conference in Lima in 1938. The commission was composed of one woman from each of the other American republics, while the Pan American Union named Miss Doris Stevens, of this country, as chairman.

The Lima conference considered that the Inter-American Commission of Women should be made an integral part of the Inter-American organization in an advisory capacity.

Pen Women Honor Past Presidents

A past presidents' night will be observed for the first time by the D. C. League of American Pen Women, in its studio at the Grafton Hotel, Monday at 8:15 p. m.

Following the dinner at 6:45, the six past national presidents, present or past members of the D. C. branch, and the three living charter members, will be escorted, by a page, to seats of honor. Past presidents are Mrs. Theodora Cunningham, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, Mrs. Edith Kingman Kern, Mrs. Annie Wilder, Mrs. Edna Colman, Mrs. Virginia King Frye, and founders, Mrs. Emma V. Triepel and Miss Anna Patten. Mrs. Madelaine Scharf, daughter of Mrs. Marion Longfellow O'Donohue, one of the founders, will represent her mother.

Other special guests will include the national president, Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann, other members of the board, and Mrs. Larz Anderson.

After the processional and candle-lighting ceremony, arranged by the studio chairman, Miss Mattie Richards Tyler, the branch president; Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, will introduce past presidents of the D. C. branch. These are Mrs. Leona Patterson Tiller, Mrs. Mabel Geddes Smith, Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, Mrs. Estelle Moses, Dr. Jean Stephenson, Mrs. Azelea Green Badgley, Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, and Miss Marguerite Merigold. Though present, Dr. Frances Moon Butts will be unable to take part in the program, and Mrs. Augustus O. Thomas will speak for her.

Delaware Society Plans Annual Ball

The Delaware State Society of the District of Columbia has completed arangements for a Congressional reception in connection with its annual ball, which will be given in the Shoreham Hotel on February 18.

The reception to Delaware Senators and their families, together with the recently elected Representative-at-large, will be held at the Shoreham on the evening stated, from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, after which there will be dancing to 1 a. m.

Mrs. Adam J. Penrod, 820 Allison street, is chairman and, with Miss Elizabeth R. Groves, 2712 Twenty-seventh street, is in charge of tickets.

D.A.R. Consider C. A. R. Merger

Possibility of uniting the National Society, Children of the American Revolution and the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution will be considered by a committee soon to be appointed by the D. A. R., it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, following the meeting of the national board of management.

The officers of the national governing board of the children's organization, which was formed but a few years after the founding of the D. A. R., are always members of the senior society. The D. A. R. includes in its program much work for children's groups through its approved schools, Junior American Citizens, Home Makers and other committees, but the C. A. R., because of its being a separate society, has had comparatively little special attention.

"It seems inconsistent," said Mrs. Robert, "that with all the work done for other children, we should not do for those of the C. A. R. also."

The president general indicated there would be a committee appointed from the C. A. R. to confer with that of the D. A. R. to consider the advisability of uniting the societies. A report will be made at the Continental Congress in April. If it is favorable it will be at least a year before any action is taken, she said.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, is national president of the C. A. R.

Soroptimist Club Members Observe February Birthdays

Members of the Soroptimist Club who have February birthdays were honored yesterday at the club's weekly luncheon at the Willard.

Mrs. Caroline Stephen, a past president, was especially honored with a large birthday cake, the gift of Mrs. John F. Bennet, the president. Miss Rena Pond, a new member, received a bouquet of flowers.

The plan of observing members' birthdays has been inaugurated by Miss Mary Turner, chairman of the program committee. Under the plan each member contributes pennies in an amount representing her age to a fund to be used at the end of the season for a party for the membership.

Homer Rodehaver and his sister, Mrs. Ruth Roodehaver Thomas, were guests at yesterday's luncheon. Mr. Rodehaver sang and also led the company in general singing.

Mothers Club to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of St. James Mothers' Club, of Mount Rainier, will be held in the school hall this afternoon at 1 o'clock. There will be an important business meeting followed by a program. Mrs. Helen Mowatt, the president, will preside and Mrs. Rose Apflebeck and Mrs. Anne Marie Kendel will be in charge of the tea.

Miss Paul To Greet Leader From Austria

Goes to New York to Meet Mme. Granitsch, Exiled for Feminism

Miss Alice Paul, founder of the National Woman's Party and chairman of the new World Woman's Party, leaves today for New York to greet Mme. Helene Granitsch, foremost feminist of Austria, the first person exiled solely because of her work to raise the status of women. She arrives this morning aboard the S. S. Normandie.

Miss Paul will be joined in the welcoming party at the French Line pier by Mrs. Stephen Pell, national chairman of the Women's Party; Mrs. Jane Norman Smith, vice chairman; Anita Pollitzer, of the National Woman's Party executive council; Mrs. Linda Littlejohn, of Australia, president of Equal Rights International; Ruby Rich, of the United Women's Organization of Australia, and others.

Arrangements are being made for an informal reception immediately after landing formalities.

On February 15, the birthday anniversary of Susan B. Anthony, American pioneer for Equal Rights, Mme. Granitsch will be the principal speaker in the Quaker Meeting House at Gramercy Park. She will then come to Washington to be a guest at Alva Belmont House, national headquarters of the National Woman's Party, and will speak at a meeting here February 19.

Mme. Granitsch, whose father-in-law, Dr. George Granitsch, was a member of the Reichstag and the Landtag, is a member of the Woman's Consultative Committee on Nationality, of the League of Nations; vice president of Equal Rights International and editor of the foremost feminist publication of Austria.

The Austrian woman, who fled across the border barely in time to escape imprisonment in a concentration camp, writes of her plight: "My home in the city and my home in the country were raided and sealed by the government. The office of the Austrian Woman's Party is closed, and our files and treasury have been confiscated."

P. E. O. Chapter Gives Luncheon

Mrs. C. A. Betts, president of Chapter M of the P. E. O., presided yesterday at the reciprocity luncheon at Woodward & Lothrops' Tea Room at which her chapter was hostess. There were readings by Mrs. Harold Prothro and State officers present each brought greetings to the representatives of the 15 chapters in the District.

The local chapters now have a membership of 400, representing a large growth within the District, according to Mrs. Warner W. Stockberger, president.

Other State officers present were Mrs. R. M. Ferguson, first vice president; Mrs. T. A. Hutton, organizer; Mrs. F. W. Reynolds, corresponding secretary; Miss Jean Maxwell, treasurer, and Dr. Ella R. Fales, a past president.

Chapter presidents attending included Mrs. Jason Waterman, Chapter C; Mrs. R. O. Kluge, Chapter E; Mrs. F. F. Elliott, Chapter F; Mrs. J. A. Smith, Chapter G and Miss Hazel B. Nielson, Chapter O.

Thomas Chippendale Was a Lady's Man says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Thomas Chippendale, the famous designer of the 18th Century, was "the" decorator of his day, and many a lady of fashion stopped at his shop for a cup of tea and to choose from his marvelous collection of tables, desks and chairs. This fondness for the ladies no doubt inspired his "Ribbon-Back Chair," which you see in the sketch. The carved cabriole leg terminating in a ball-and-claw foot is also typically Chippendale . . . and this modern reproduction loses none of its charm by the modern note sounded in its pale yellow leather-covered seat.

Hoover Urges Congress Halt Drift to War

Charges Roosevelt's Foreign Policies Are Threat to U. S. Liberty

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Herbert Hoover tonight accused President Roosevelt of projecting an unprecedented expansion of foreign policy likely to lead to war and appealed to Congress to "have this adventure clarified before we go blindly into great increases in armament."

He said, "A war to save liberty would probably destroy liberty. In my view, another great war will make dictatorship universal."

While European democracies were "consciously or unconsciously flooding us with propaganda," the former President said in a speech prepared for the Council on Foreign Relations and broadcast, Mr. Roosevelt had announced a "new departure" for dealing with the world which would lead logically to "pressures" such as economic sanctions.

Method of Coercion

"These proposals to use some sort of coercion against nations are, of course, a complete departure from neutrality in other peoples' wars. It is the method of coercion, not persuasion. It is in direct violation of Secretary Hull's reaffirmation, on which the ink is but 60 days dry, of an old American policy that 'the intervention of any state in the internal and external affairs of another is inadmissible.'"

"Those who think in terms of economic sanctions," Hoover added, "should also think in terms of war." For, he said, "any form of direct or indirect coercion of nations is force and is the straight path to war itself."

"Our country standing apart," he said, "can make a contribution of transcendent service in holding aloft the banner of moral relationships."

Promote Peace by Peace

Suggesting a procedure, he declared the American people should "express unhesitatingly their indignation against wrong and persecution" and should aid the suffering.

"We should not be isolationists in promoting peace by the methods of peace," he said.

"We should not be isolationists in proposals to join in the most healing of all processes of peace—economic co-operation to restore prosperity.

"But surely all reason, all history, all our own experience show that wrongs cannot be righted and durable peace cannot be imposed on nations by force, threats, economic pressures on war.

"I want America to stand against that principle if it is the last nation under that banner. I want it to stand there because it is the only hope of preserving liberty on this continent. That is America's greatest service to mankind."

To defend America against "ideologies," he recommended elimination of "communist, socialist and fascist ideas and persons from our own institutions."

Need to Keep Our Heads

"Our minds," the former President said in opening his address, "are being prepared to accept war as inevitable. We need to keep our heads. . . . We have need to strip emotion from these questions (of international matters) as much as we can. They are questions of life or death, not only to men, but also to nations."

"Our foreign policies in these major dimensions," he went on, "must be determined by the American people and the Congress, not by the President alone. The citizens can also in some degree appraise our dangers. After all, it is the people who are made poor and who sacrifice their lives and the lives of their sons.

"All this," he said, "becomes the most momentous change in American policies of peace and war since we entered the World War . . .

"To determine the issue, let me propose some questions that the American people deserve to have answered:

"1. Shall we reverse our traditional policy at this time?

"2. Shall we set ourselves up to determine who the aggressor is in the world?

"3. Shall we engage in embargoes, boycotts, enonomic sanctions against aggressor nations?

"4. Shall we do this where the Western Hemisphere is not attacked?

"5. Shall we provide an armament greater than that necessary to protect the Western Hemisphere from military invasion?

"6. Shall we take collective action with other nations to make these more than words and short of war policies effective?

Congo's Terrors Described Here by Denises, Explorers Who Made Film, 'Dark Rapture'

Tell of Split-Second Escapes From Tiger And Mad Elephant

Two explorers arrived in Washington by plane yesterday morning and both admtited that on several occasions while taking photographs in the African jungle, they had been scared to death. They described exactly how it feels.

They were Armand Denis, who made "Goona Goona" in Bali, and "Dark Rapture" in the Belgian Congo, and his wife, Mrs. Leila Roosevelt Denis, who is related to the White House Roosevelts, and is, besides, second cousin to former President Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Denis had been so scared when a lioness charged at her in the Congo that she would not describe how it happened. After her husband had done so, however, she told how she felt.

Tells of Fear Symptoms

"It was as though my hands and feet had died and disappeared," she said. "I had no sensation beyond the knees and elbows."

"Now my symptoms are different," reported her husband. He had had a chance to observe them on the same occasion, when their lives were saved by a miraculously accurate last second shot by a mechanic.

There had been an occasion also when he and Leila had watched an elephant who thought he had got them, stamp their imagined forms into the ground with his feet and knees.

"At the time," Denis said, "I can't move. I'm as though paralyzed. Then when it is over I get excited and exhilarated, and there is a pounding in my kidneys that is so painful it doubles you up."

Mrs. Denis, mother of four children, is a clear-eyed, healthy-skinned person of medium height, who looks as though she had just come in from a good hockey game.

"We are interested in the border-line peoples, those in transition from desert to forest life, or from forest to desert," said Denis.

Pigmies Disappearing

"It isn't likely the pigmies, for example, will last more than another 150 years. They lack many of the elemental psychological elements of man. They are not imitative, for example. And while they believe in evil spirits and powers, they have nothing you could dignify as religion."

Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt Denis, who explore the jungles of Africa and make movies too, are shown as they relaxed yesterday in their hotel suite

The visit with the pigmies was on the most recent expedition of the couple, which was taken for the double purpose of making "Dark Rapture" and to make a photographic study for the Belgian government of the most primitive jungle said to remain in Africa, the Kivu area on the verge of the Congo. Much of the area, though showing signs of a former heavy population, was almost devoid of native life, Denis said. He explained that in the past decades the Masisi, a cannibal tribe, literally had eaten up the former inhabitants.

"Most of our porters belonged to the Masisi," Denis reported. "And I talked with some of the older ones who had been eaters of human meat. But today whatever food of that kind they get has to be bootlegged. The practice has been almost entirely stamped out. And fortunately they never liked white meat."

Jungle Film to Be Shown

"Dark Rapture" was shown in Washington at the White House last year and will be shown at the National Press Club tonight, and beginning Sunday at the Belasco Theater.

"The greatest dangers," Denis recited in order, "are from fire, road accidents, insects—they carry a wonderful collection of diseases, animals—but mostly because you bother them; and last of all the natives. The danger from natives is least, except for an occasional lunatic, or a homicidal maniac, who would be restrained in civilization, but who is allowed to run loose in Africa because there is no place to put him."

Warring Jurors Shielded From Talk of Case

Warring

who won the 1,000-to1 numbers bets and were paid off at from 400 to 1 to 600 to 1.

The first trial jury was chosen in about two hours. But yesterday Justice Laws and the six attorneys were occupied until well after dark questioning nearly 100 veniremen who included jurors from the other two criminal branches of District Court and a group from the civil jury list.

District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson, the prosecutors, probed the talesmen's acquaintance with the defendants, their attorneys and their contacts with the numbers racket. Thirteen of the panel said they were acquainted with persons in the numbers racket.

U. S. Workers Excluded

One juror asked whether persons in the "racket" or the "business" were meant, explaining that he knew henchmen but not backers. The Government challenged him.

Justice Laws excluded all talesmen who worked for the Government.

Examined for Prejudices

The defense counsel examined the prospective jurors on their prejudices against gambling, asking whether they could give a fair trial on a conspiracy charge to men in the gambling business. Several said they could not and were ruled out.

Questioned by the Government, Chester C. Hayes, a salesman, said he had a conviction in favor of gambling but later explained that he meant legalized gambling. He was not challenged and was one of those sworn in.

The Government had used 7 of its 12 challenges and the defense 6 of its 14 when both sides announced themselves content. Justice Laws immediately ordered the jurors sworn. He then said there had been considerable newspaper attention given the case and that wide discussion had been provoked. He added that he felt that the usual admonition not to read the papers or discuss the case might not be sufficient and he would have the jurors kept under guard until the case was over.

Shorter Trial Expected

The case was expected to take about two weeks, a week less than before, because much time will be saved through questions of law having been settled in the first trial.

United States Deputy Marshall John Upperman was given custody of the 13 men. Two women deputies, Mrs. Margaret Ferris and Mrs. Violet Wheatcraft, were assigned to take care of the one woman juror, Mrs. Della B. Green.

The trial will resume at 9:45 a. m. today.

2 Jailed in Attack On Union Head

Walter W. Bainbridge, 35, and Lynn Foster Hedges, 50, both giving address in the 1500 block of Seventeenth street northwest, were arrested yesterday on assault charged in a warrant sworn out by Bryce B. Holcomb, business manager of the Washington local of the Painters Union.

Holcomb said he was attacked Monday as he was getting his car out of a garage in the 500 block of G street northwest. Holcomb gave labor union rivalry as a motive for the attack.

Fort Dupont CCC Gets Snappy New Green Uniforms

Single-breasted coats with pleated backs will replace the khaki lumberjacks now in service. Although olive drab shirts and black ties will be worn with the new outfit, dark green trousers and black shoes will replace the brown slacks and shoes which are part of the present dress uniform.

6 D. C. Students Get Foreign Posts

Four students at Georgetown University and two at George Washington were successful in recent foreign service examinations, the State Department announced yesterday. They were among 21 successful candidates.

Those from Georgetown were Delano McKelvey, of Washington; Julian L. Nugent, jr., of Pecos, N. Mex.; Joseph Palmer 2d, of Belmont, Mass., and Joseph K. Vinson, of Houston, Tex. The two from George Washington were Charles R. Burrows, of Willard, Ohio, and R. Kenneth Oakley, of Washington.

Snow, Sleet, Rain Batter the West

Snow, sleet and rain pelted scattered sections of the West yesterday for the third day, threatening to block highways in many places.

Much colder weather, preceded by snow and rain was forecast for the entire Midwest. More snow was in prospect in the East. At least 42 deaths have been reported since Sunday night along the paths of storms between Utah and Maine.

Imperial Airways Plans Seasonal Schedule to Canada

London, Feb. 1 (AP).—Britain's Imperial Airways gave notice today of determination to go ahead with plans for a "scheduled seasonal" transatlantic air service starting June 1 despite present lack of permission to land in New York.

The determination was emphasized officially by Capt. Harold Balfour undersecretary for air, in a House of Commons statement concerning flights to Canada by way of Ireland and Newfoundland.

His designation of the flights as "seasonal" was considered indication Imperial Airways is not ready to carry on winter service with land planes when "flying boats" are prevented by ice from landing at Botwood Harbor, Newfoundland.

House Asks for Report On Key Bridge Closing

The House District Committee yesterday asked the District Commissioners for a report on the temporary closing of Key Bridge to passenger vehicular traffic during the day.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal explained that the District heads had not closed the bridge, but he said the report will be furnished. The bridge was closed by order of the Federal authorities, he said.

Legislators Frown on O'Conor Bill

Finance Committe Held About to Reject Measure Abolishing State Loans Office

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's strength in the Legislature teetered in the balance tonight, with the powerful Senate Finance Committee on the verge of ditching a portion of his government reorganization program.

Immediate issue was the O'Connor-backed bill abolishing the State loans commissioner's office, a measure on which the committee yesterday held a two-and-a-half-hour hearing.

Finance Chairman Dudley Roe, regarded as the righthand man of the Administration through his post as majority floor leader in the Senate, told the committee today that, as a result of yesterday's hearing, it "appears the committee is very much opposed to the bill."

He pointed out, however, that no vote would be taken on a report until a hearing had been held for representatives of the Governor's reorganization committee, headed by Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University.

Compromise Suggested

The Bowman committee recommended the reorganization program which O'Conor has passed on to the Assembly with his unqualified approval. State Loans Commissioner W. David Tilghman, jr., testified before the finance committee yesterday that no investigation was made of his office by the Bowman group.

Taking the temperature of his committee, Senator Roe suggested it might be advisable to name a subcommittee to confer with the Governor on possible compromises. If no compromise could be reached, and committee sentiment did not change, the bill might not even be reported out, he added.

"Why not have the courage to report it out unfavorably, instead of letting it die in committee?", demanded Senator Wilmer Carter (Democrat), Third, Baltimore. Other committeemen commented that this might be "embarrassing."

Weathervane for Rest

Although relatively unimportant in itself, compared with other reorganization bills by O'Conor, the loans commissionership has assumed, in two days, the status of a weathervane pointing the direction of the legislative wind on administration bills.

Gov. O'Conor has insisted so far that he has no intention of trying personally to assist passage of his measures through the Assembly. At the same time, Assemblymen held it would not be helpful to his prestige to sit idly by if his program came under heavy legislative fire.

Dr. Bowman's office notified Senator Roe today that the educator would appear before the finance committee as soon as he returns from a trip to Florida.

Developments in the finance committee wound up the Assembly's busiest day of the 1939 session. Two more reorganization bills, setting up a budget and procurement department and making changes in State hospital administration, were introduced, along with a number of local measures.

Montgomery Bill Passes Md. Senate

Measure Makes Town Eligible to Receive State Gas Taxes

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1.—Local bills affecting Montgomery, Garrett, Washington, Caroline and Anne Arundel counties were passed today by the Senate.

One measure, introduced by Senator Robert Peter (Democrat), of Montgomery, would include the Town of Washington Grove in the list of Montgomery County's incorporated towns, thus making it eligible to receive a portion of the gasoline taxes allocated by the State roads commission.

Also passed was a measure by Senator Clifford Friend (Republican), of Garrett, prohibiting Garrett County officials from making any contract involving more than $300 of county funds without first advertising for bids.

Senator Louis N. Phipps (Democrat), of Anne Arundel, was sponsor of another measure, which would increase the number of Anne Arundel County commissioners from six to eight.

Prince Georges County Delegates today jointly introduced a bill authorizing increasing to $50,000 of the bonded indebtedness of Seat Pleasant, Md.

The mayor and common council of the town would be authorized to levy a front foot tax on real property to retire the debt.

Over protests of the Republican minority, the Senate today suspended rules to pass a bill authorizing the St. Mary's County commissioners to levy $10,000 a year for transportation of children to private schools in the county.

Senator Clifford Friend, joining other Republicans in opposing the measure, asserted he was "against the principal involved—that of transporting private school students with public funds."

Leasure Finds Democracy Is Too Expensive

The greatest menace to democracy is its cost, Chester Leasure, legal representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told the Takoma Park (Md.) Chamber of Commerce at a dinner last night. He spoke on "Liberalism."

Though considering himself a "liberal," he said he was troubled to consider the Government now is "spending $2 for every $1 it takes in." "What a headache we'll have when we wake up," he added.

Members of the chamber expressed concern over reports that Takoma Park residents spend more in Washington retail stores than any other Montgomery County settlement except Chevy Chase. Attention was called to the shopping center recently opened in Silver Spring after that community was said to send fewer shoppers into the District.

New members admitted last night were Maj. William Fischer, Russell Ridgeway, Herman Bernstein, L. T. Slabaugh and Sherman W. Jack. O. W. Youngblood presided.

Dying Truckman Injures Pair

Guy Warren Evans, 36, of 1000 G street northeast, was dying yesterday afternoon and didn't know it. Because of that he injured two persons.

Driving along Pennsylvania avenue, he fainted and his truck hit a car in the 1700 block, injuring Beulah White, 21, of 9 Blackstone road, Friendship Heights.

She was alighting from the automobile which was driven by Mrs. Irene Clark, of 1750 Pennsylvania avenue, and had to be treated at Emergency Hospital for a crushed foot. Evans, however, told police he "would be all right in a minute," and refused treatment.

A short time later at Twenty-third street and New York avenue northwest, Evans' truck struck the car of Samuel L. Barton, of the United States Naval Hospital.

This time Evans was dead. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will pronounce actual cause of death today.

Merit System For County Asked In Silver Spring

The East Sligo Valley Citizens Association, meeting last night in the Liquor Control Board Building at Silver Spring, Md., adopted a resolution asking the State Legislature to restore a merit system for county employes below policy-making positions. The resolution said it "in no way censured" the Legislature for repealing the former merit bill "because it was necessary to clarify its legal status."

The association asked that the part of its area now taxed for support of the Kensington fire department be permitted to help support the Silver Spring department.

A resolution was adopted criticizing the county supervisors for not cleaning ice off the sidewalk in front of the courthouse.

The association appropriated $10 as its part of the prize for an essay contest sponsored by the inter-organization committee to select a flower or shrub for the Silver Spring area and adopted a vote of confidence in Granville C. Stagg, delegate to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

2 More Enter Md. Race for Congress

Balch and Higgins Are New Aspirants In First District; Bennett Withdraws

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 1.—Two new candidates entered the race for the Democratic nomination to succeed Representative T. Alan Goldsborough of Maryland's First District today, and another was reported to have withdrawn.

The two new candidates were:

Henry Herbert Balch, of Easton, a former State's attorney of Talbot County.

Olin R. Higgins, former State Senator from Dorchester County.

Higgins said that State Senator Earl Bennett, of Dorchester, had decided not to be a candidate and has thrown his support to Higgins.

Balch announced that he had received the unanimous indorsement of the Talbot County State Central Committee and other Democratic leaders of the county.

Higgins came into the spotlight as candidate when he announced he had "pledges of support from several sections of the Eastern Shore."

State Senator David J. Ward has received the indorsement of the Wicomico County State Central Committee.

G. Hale Harrison, secretary of the Worcester County State Central Committee, announced he had advanced Ward's candidacy, that Ward is the only one who has received the support of the Administration in Washington, and that Ward is satisfactory to Congressman Goldsborough.

The other members of the Worcester County committee have indorsed State Senator Thomas Johnson of that county.

Curtis W. Long, Salisbury attorney, has announced as a "Tydings Democrat" running on an "anti-New Deal platform."

Others who have been mentioned include State Senator Dudley Rue, floor leader of the Assembly's upper House, and William S. Gordy, retired State comptroller.

The vacancy arises from the appointment of Representative Goldsborough to a Federal judgeship in the District of Columbia by President Roosevelt. The Senate has not yet confirmed the appointment.

Gov. O'Conor Upholds Firing Of Quenstedt

State Board Given Free Hand in Dismissal Of Md. Warden

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Feb. 1.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor gave the State board of welfare a free hand today in its ouster of Warden Walter E. Quenstedt, of the House of Correction.

After an hour's conference with Harold E. Donnell, State prison superintendent, and Charles J. Butler, board chairman, Gov. O'Conor announced:

"I am intnsely interested in the displaced nor in whoy they (the board of welfare) appoint. I will uphold their hands as long as the public interest is served, and I am not interested in naming anybody to the post."

Quenstedt was ousted by the board yesterday, after an all-day conference following the arrest by Baltimore policemen of two trusties at the institution.

"I heard nothing from Mr. Butler or Mr. Donnell to cause me to question the action of the welfare board," O'Conor added. "As to any criminal charges, that must wait upon action of Marvin I. Anderson, State's attorney for Anne Arundel County."

The house of corection is located in Ane Arundel County.

Anderson said he would not comment on the Quenstedt case until he has received a transcript of testimony taken at yesterday's board meeting in Baltimore.

At the warden's residence, Quenstedt said his dismissal was "a complete mystery to me."

"I was not called before the board or in any way given an opportunity to answer whatever accusations or stories (that may have been presented," he said. "I have not been accorded the right of facing my accuser or accusers and of making a defense.

"I have done nothing to justify dismissal. I have not been informed of the charges upon which the action was taken."

MRS. CARRIE ELLIOTT

Past 70, She Adds Painting To 1,001 Cultural Interests

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really lots of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

High above Cayuga's waters Carrie Elliott was born on the eighteenth day of November, 1867, but it wasn't until last winter that she began to go in for painting in a serious way.

That's pretty rude, starting out by telling a lady's age right down to the day, except that Mrs. Elliott does not have time to be sensitive about such trifles. She is too busy indulging her flair for landscapes in water colors, writing verse, adding to her collection of antique jewelry and doing the 1,001 other things that challenge her interest.

"I'm proud of my age, not sensitive about it," she says, not with the showy emphasis of one deliberately trying to stay young, but as a simple statement of fact.

If Mrs. Elliott is more alert mentally than many people half her years, if she is better read and more in tune with the times, it is not because she makes a conscious effort to be that way. She simply does what she likes and wants to do. Whatever effect that may have on her personality and appearance is purely incidental.

Graduate of Vassar College

She was nearly 70 before she had an appreciable amount of time she could call her own, when she could plan and do things that concerned only herself. A graduate of Vassar College, she was married soon after receiving her diploma to an electrical engineer, E. Leavenworth Elliott.

They became the parents of a daughter and upon her graduation from college the couple began to travel, sometimes for pleasure and sometimes in connection with Mr. Elliott's professional duties. They covered the United States and went through Europe and North Africa.

A couple of years ago, Mr. Elliott, for whose uncle the city of Leavenworth, Kans., was named, died. His wife was "on her own," in a manner of speaking, for the first time in her life.

Already she had begun to write verse, publishing a small volume of poems in 1935, but now she looked to other ways to be creative. She is rather apologetic about her poems because they are just natural and unaffected, rather than "arty." "My daughter, Martha, writes much better poetry than I," Mrs. Elliott says.

Specializes in Landscapes

Last winter, with some trepidation, she bought the few essentials needed for water color painting and went to work. Landscapes were, and still are, her specialty. She likes to do views of her country home in New Hampshire, where she spends the summers.

This is her sixth consecutive winter in Washington. Her Capital home is with friends who live at 6910 Eighth street northwest. The walls of Mrs. Elliott's bedroom are covered with her beloved New Hampshire skies, trees, brooks and houses, as she transcribes them into cheerful blues, greens, reds and browns.

She even tries her hand at stunt painting now and then. There is one picture on the wall which you would wager is two pictures—one framing the other—until you pass your fingers over the surface and find out you've been the victim of an optical illusion produced by Mrs. Elliott's tricky brush.

Two months of each year, one in the spring and another in the winter, she spends in New York City with her daughter, who is a department manager in one of the Fifth avenue department stores. Maybe you've seen her sometime in a Gotham pawnshop.

Browses in Pawnshops

"I love to go through pawnshops," says Mrs. Elliott, explaining that they are responsible for some of her nicest pieces of antique jewelry. It was in a Monte Carlo pawnshop she procured the lorgnette, set with amethysts, which is one of the most interesting items in her antique collection. It was exchanged for the usual ticket, plus cash, by a Russian princess who had to pay a gambling debt.

She has a lavalliere that came out of an Oxford, England, pawnshop. The collection also includes a ring she found outside the Roman Forum, a reversible scarab ring and miscellaneous brooches, necklaces, etc., as well as several family heirlooms.

"Do you know what I named our place in New Hampshire?" Mrs. Elliott asks, a mischievous twinkle in her eye. "I named it Barberry Coast, because of the barberry shrubs around it. Isn't that wicked?"

11 D. C. Bills Introduced In Congress

Insurance Control Leads List Offered By Committees And Rep. Dirksen

The District's legislative machinery got into operation yesterday with the introduction of 11 local bills in the Senate and House by chairmen and members of the District committees.

Five of the District bills were offered in both the Senate and the House, while two were put in the House hopper alone and four in the Senate.

Measures introduced by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, propose:

Regulation of fire insurance rates by the superintendent of insurance.

To raise the quota of appointments to West Point from the District from five to nine.

To regulate the practice of engineering within the District and to set up a board of licensure.

A change in the public school salary scale to permit the hiring of research assistants for work now done by teachers.

To reduce the allowable margin of error on electric meters from 4 to 2 per cent.

Authorization for the Public Utilities Commission to reduce the number of licensed taxicabs.

To change the licensing date of taxicabs, sightseeing cars, etc., to conform with that of private vehicles, March 1.

Amendment of school teachers' retirement act to compel every teacher to indicate heir of retirement fund in case of death.

Fechner Describes CCC Camps' Work

The work of the Civilian Conservation Corps in building and improving parks and recreational areas was described by Robert Fechner, director of the corps, last night before an audience of 900 in the Labor Department auditorium. Motion pictures of CCC camps in Great Smoky Mountain National Park and in Pennsylvania were shown after his talk.

The Civilian Conservation Corps is designed to protect our natural resources, as well as contribute toward a solution of the unemployment problem, said Fechner, describing the work of the corps in fighting forest fires and forest enemies, such as insects and diseases.

ARMY ROUTS HOYAS; NAVY BEATS OWLS

G. U. Downed By 36-17 in Listless Fray

Kobes and Gillem in Star Roles; Second Straight Road Loss For Hilltop Five

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Army's basketball team had little trouble with Georgetown University here this afternoon, defeating the Hoyas in a loosely played game, 36 to 17. It was G. U.'s second straight loss on a two-day road trip.

Basket making by both sides was poor, although the Cadets' tight man-to-man defense gave the Georgetown team little opportunity for free shooting. The Cadets on the other hand, while showing excellent team work and play-making ability, missed a large proportion of shots.

The first half went four minutes without either side hitting the basket. Frank Kobes, Army center, was the first to score, dropping in a follow set-up shot after Walter Brinker's miss. Four minutes later Johnny Schmitt tied the score with two free throws. This broke the ice, and Army gradually drew ahead on Kobes' second follow-up shot, free throws by Wobes, Brinker and Sullivan, and Archie Gillem's three long set shots. The half ended with Army ahead, 19 to 10.

Georgetown opened up the second half with Rizzi's free throw, but the Hoyas were held to three free throws and two goals during the period, while the Cadets continued to pile up their score.

Frank Kobes was high man for Army and the game, accounting for 11 points with five field goals and a free throw. Archie Gillem being close behind with five baskets. Irving Rizzi was high man for Georgetown with five points, making three free throws and one field goal.

Army has now won eight of nine games played, having lost only to Ohio State University.

Nat Vanguard, Harris Arrive At Orlando

Rookie Group Starts Training Month In Advance

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 1.—The Washington Senators began a new baseball experiment today with the arrival of Manager Bucky Harris and a group of rookies for a month's schooling in advance of the regular spring training.

HARRIS

The regulars aren't due until March 1 and the pre-season instruction for the young pitching and catching prospects is part of a system of close supervision that Harris and owner Clark Griffith have mapped out for the youngsters.

"We've brought them down early," Harris said, "so that each one of them will have every opportunity to get into condition and absorb the fundamentals that we wouldn't have time to give them if they reported along with the regulars a month from now."

"It's not exactly the start of a plan to build a young ball club for Washington," Bucky explained.

"We've got a pretty young ball club new. There's Buddy Lewis, Cecil Travis, Joe Krakauskas, Jimmy Wasdell, Taft Wright and the rest. They're not old men by a long shot."

Most of the players reporting here are "as green as grass," but Harris regards several of them as good prospects.

"Robert Garner, our 6 foot, 7 inch pitcher, has a nice appearance on the hill. He only won 10 and lost seven in the Eastern Shore League last year but he was bothered by a bad blood clot on his leg. He's got a manner of pitching a lot like that of Dazzy Vance.

"Then there's Walter Masterson, a Philadelphia semi-pro who traveled with us a great deal last year towards the end of the season. He has a nice fast one when he's right and the ball hops a little. I think that he'll be a pretty fair pitcher some day."

Harris expects Krakauskas to be one of Washington's pitching mainstays this year.

"We have to make a few improvements on him, that's why he's down here," Bucky explained. "His control the latter part of last season was materially better than it was in the spring and he should be a definitely improved player this summer."

Camilli in Fold

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The twenty-third Dodger fell in line today when First Baseman Dolph Camilli sent in his signed contract. Camilli, a holdout for two weeks of the 1937 season and a portion of last year's spring training session, expressed himself as well pleased with the contract, the terms of which were not revealed.

From Ditch to Race Track in One Day

Sonja Henie Climbs Fence to Cut Ribbon At Hollywood Track

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 1.—Gulfstream Park racetrack opened today with an estimated 15,000 gay resorters storming the fences to see the $1,400,000 house that young Jack Horning built to buck swanky Hialeah Park.

Even blonde Sonja Henie, who cut a blue-and-white ribbon to open the track officially, had to climb the waist-high fence with her party of eight. Delayed in a traffic jam and unable to get near the entrance because of the milling crowd, the famous ice skater followed the example of hundreds of others.

Because of the fence-climbing, no official attendance figure was available. Track officials based their estimate on the fact that the 8,000 seats were filled, while almost the same number of persons milled around the front lawn, the paddock and the betting lanes.

At Joseph E. Widener's beautiful Hialeah Park attendance slumped 3,140 and the mutuel "handle" dropped from $468,447 to $293,258 in comparison with February 1 of last year, a Tuesday. It was pointed out, however, that this racing season had lagged behind 1938 so far anyway and that Gulfstream's opening day was no gauge of its normal draw.

The Hialeah crowd of 7,661 by turnstile count saw Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Pasteurized, a 1-to-2 favorite, win the featured Grade A Handicap under Jockey Don Meade, the comeback kid. Pasteurized, winner of the Belmont Stakes last summer, beat E. R. Bradley's Bar Fly by a neck with

Sherwood Five Again Beats Annapolis

For the second time this season, Sherwood High cagers beat Annapolis yesterday on the Sherwood court, by a 34-30 count. The teams earlier this season battled to a stalemate in regulation time, Sherwood winning in the extra period.

Outstanding the victory was Billy Bond, classy forward of the winners, who totaled 21 points. Freeney and Lane, of the losers, turned in 8 and 7 points, respectively, to pace their team.

Warren High Whips County Foe, 24-10

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 1.—Fredericksburg High School boys were defeated here last night by the Warren County High School Wildcats, 24 to 10. Capt. Wilbur Burke, of the Wildcats, led the scoring with 12 points, including 5 field goals and 2 foul shots. Ohler, Wildcat guard, made all of his 7 points from free goals.

The Warren County High School girls and Fredericksburg, in a curtain raiser, played to a 22-to-22 deadlock.

Central High Tankmen Lose To McDonogh

46-19 Score Worst Whipping in Four Swimming Seasons

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Feb. 1.—The invading Central High School swimming team suffered its worst licking in four years here today, winning only two events in losing to McDonogh School, 46-19, in the neutral Knights of Columbus pool.

Central's lone first places were gained in the 200-yard freestyle relay, last event on the program, when a team composed of Bickford, Sanders, Sperling and Bollan breezed home in one minute 55 seconds, and the 100-yard backstroke, won by Bamman.

Bollan was the outstanding Central swimmer, placing second in the 100-yard freestyle, in addition to anchoring the winning relay team.

J. Wolfe, scoring firsts in diving, an event in which Central was not entered, and the 100-yard breaststroke, and a second in the 100-yard freestyle was McDonogh's leading point-scorer.

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Schell (M.); second, Taylor (M.); third, Sanders (C.). Time, 27.5 secs.

Financial Angle Of '40 Olympics Will Be Lessened

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 1.—With the Olympic games still a year away, the problem of financing American participation is not causing the headaches it did before the 1936 games, it was learned tonight.

Although approximately $325,000 will be needed to send a full squad of around 385 athletes to Finland for the summer games, the American Olympic Committee hopes its task of raising funds will not be as difficult as it was three years ago, when there were objections to participation because the games were held in Germany.

It was pointed out, however, that the outlook is not optimistic enough for any relaxation in the job of raising funds because there still is plenty of work to be done to guarantee full representation in Helsingfors.

The job will be easier because:

1. The games are being held in a country not involved in any of the current political and racial controversies.

2. A long-range program of financing was adopted shortly after the 1936 games and it is functioning effectively.

The United States undoubtedly will be represented in the 15 different sports on the program and each of the individual committees will contribute funds raised through the various try-out meets. The sports, five less than the Berlin program, are: Track and field, gymnastics, swimming and water polo, rowing, yachting, canoeing, wrestling, weight-lifting, boxing, shooting, fencing, modern pentathlon, riding, football (soccer) and gliding.

Hampden-Sydney Grid Practice on Feb. 14

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Feb. 1 (AP). Thirty-six candidates, the largest spring squad in Tiger history, are expected to answer Coach Charles (Yank) Bernier's call for start of spring football practice at Hampden-Sydney College on February 14.

Assistant Coaches Herman (Red) Smith and David (Ik) Reveley already have started the conditioning process.

U. S. Accepts Great Britain's Polo Challenge

Three-Match Series To Be Held in June At Long Island

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 1.—The United States tonight formally accepted Great Britain's challenge for an international polo series on Long Island in June.

It will be a three-match series on international field in Meadowbrook for the International Polo Challenge Cup, formerly known as the Westchester trophy for which Anglo-Americans have been playing since 1886.

The acceptance was contained in a letter mailed by Robert E. Strawbridge, jr., chairman of the United States Polo Association, to Maj. J. J. Astor, chairman of the Hurlingham Club in London.

Dates for the series, last played in London in June, 1936 when the United States won for the fifth consecutive time, have not been set but it will be early in June.

American plans for the defense are expected to start immediately. A squad of 13 players was selected last fall on the basis of play during the Open championships and they soon will begin practice at Aiken, S. C.

Included in that group are four 10-goal men—Tommy Hitchcock, Michael Phipps, Stewart Iglehart and Cecil Smith. Chances are they will compose the defense team which would give the United States the first 40-goal team in history.

Wardensville High Bows to Mathias, 48-25

Wardensville, W. Va., Feb. 1.—Wardensville High dropped a 48-to-25 cage decision to Matias High on the local floor. Beals, center of the victors, turned in a total of 30 points. Mathias took a lead in the first quarter and won as it pleased, the second team seeing action for two quarters. In a preliminary, Wardensville girls lost a close 21-to-20 game to Mathias.

Temple Falls Before Tars' Rally, 33-28

Ghesquiere Leader In Middies' Attack; Visitors Trail, 19-10, At Intermission

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1.—In the latter part of the second half of today's basketball game here the Navy ran up a good margin, the half ending 19 to 10 in its favor and the game 33 to 28.

McDermott opened the scoring with a field goal for Temple, which was promptly evened by Laney. Then McDermott scored from the line and Hanley scored on a very long sideshot to give the Navy a 1-point lead. Lead by a point or two alternated until nine minutes had passed, when the Navy forged to the front through two field goals by Laney, his second score coming on a fine relay play started by Lee and continuing Chesquiere to Gillette to Laney.

The line shooting of the Navy was a big factor in its scoring. Its first seven tries were successes, while in the same period Temple only added 2 points to its total in this way.

Jones and Nicol had taken the places of Usilton and McDermott as Temple forwards about the middle of the first half, but the starters took the floor as the half ended. McDermott was considerably more effective in this period, as were Black and Boyle, the regular guards, the latter making four baskets, which, with his line goal in the first half, made him high scorer for his side. Chesquiere, Navy center, with 10 points, was the high scorer of the game, though much below his usual figure.

Hanley, Navy guard, who has not figured much in the scoring heretofore, dropped three goals on long shots, two of them being at very long range. Gillette, also, was off in his shooting, though he played his floor game at a terrific pace.

National Rifle Group Meeting Opens Today

The sixty-eighth annual meeting of the National Rifle Association of America opens at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow morning and continues through Saturday when an elaborate banquet will climax the event.

The group will hold an open forum in the Garden Room of the Mayflower tomorrow morning at 9:30 and at 2:30 the directors will meet to take care of election of officers and other business.

Col. L. W. T. Walker, United States Marine Corps, will be toastmaster of the banquet. Among the speakers Walker will introduce are Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, Deputy Chief of Staff U. S. Army, and Brig. Gen. H. A. Pickert, Commissioner of Police, Detroit.

Shepherd College Meets Gallaudet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Feb. 1.—Shepherd College courtmen meet the strong Alderson-Broadus five here Thursday night and conclude the week's schedule against Gallaudet in Washington.

Thursday's visitors boast a record of eight consecutive victories in West Virginia collegiate competition and have scored more than 60 points a game over six opponents, including Davis-Elkins and West Liberty.

The Rams have averaged over 58 points a game, and scored 107 against a pick-up team in practice, and may crack the streak of the Baptists.

Budge Beats Vines Leads Series, 5-Up

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 1 (U.P.).—Don Budge today scored his second triumph in as many days over Ellsworth Vines to take a five-match lead in their current professional tennis tour. Budge won, 10-8, 7-5.

Budge, who has won 13 of the 21 matches played, took Vines in straight sets at Nassau, Bahamas, yesterday.

St. Albans Travels For Game Today

St. Albans hope of gaining its fourth basketball victory of the season will be carried to Baltimore today, where Friends School, of that city, will be met at 3:30. The Saints whipped Friends, of Washington, Tuesday.

Briarley J. V. Wins Fifth Game, 33-18

Briarley Military Academy junior varsity won its fifth game in six starts this season yesterday on the Laurel Armory floor, 33-18, over the junior basketers of Georgetown Prep. Bob Winston, center of the victors, was high scorer with 17 points, more than half the team's total.

This Morning

By The Staff

(During the vacation of Shirley Povich, this column will be written by members of The Post's sports staff.)

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Earl Whitehill, released by the Indians yesterday a week before his thirty-ninth birthday, was starring in the South Atlantic League in 1920 when an outfielder named Goose Goslin in the same league was being scouted by the Nats . . . they were often pitching opponents, Goslin hurling for Greenville and Whitehill for Columbia . . . the only year in which Whitehill won as many as 20 games in his 16-season career in the majors was 1933, when his 22 wins helped the Nats to win the pennant . . . Whitehill's pet hate in baseball was Ty Cobb, under whom he broke in as a Detroit rookie . . . in a game in which Whitehill was pitching for Birmingham in 1921, an irate fan took the shouts of the bleacherites literally . . . he hauled off with a gun, blazed away and killed the umpire.

WHITEHILL

The Detroit Lions and Chicago Cardinals will be the Western clubs of the National Football League which will appear on the Redskins' Griffith Stadium schedule next fall, according to George Marshall, who will attend the league's annual schedule meeting at Chicago next week . . . the Redskins' third Western opponent will be the Green Bay Packers, who will be played at Green Bay . . . Marshall is one of the prime movers in the attempt to install Postmaster General James Farley as czar of professional football . . . the matter has been discussed informally by the league's club owners and is beyond the rumor stage . . . but reports that Farley would be given a $75,000 salary are absurd . . . pro football can't stand that kind of a tax . . . Judge Landis receives only $50,000 as czar of the big leagues, and pro football is a puny infant compared to the lusty financial condition of major league baseball.

FARLEY

Gene Normile, former manager of Jack Dempsey, and now a prominent turfman on the Coast, offers to wager that Kayak II, Seabiscuit's stablemate, will beat any other contender in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, with the exception of the Biscuit . . . He is offering even money . . . future book odds on Kayak II have dwindled from 50 to 1 to 15 to 1 since he won a mile race at Santa Anita in 1:36 1-5 . . . Florida's new track, Gulfstream Park, is prepared to lose money on its opening meeting . . . but will operate in the hope that Joseph D. Widener, Hialeah owner, will buy it out . . . Old-timers declare that Exterminator was the most intelligent horse that ever raced . . . that he approached the starting gate with one eye cocked on the starter, and that he was the only horse that seemed to know when the finish line had been reached.

BRADDOCK

Jimmy Braddock will live comfortably as long as Joe Louis continues to hold the championship and fight regularly . . . Braddock receives 10 per cent of all of Louis' purses . . . it was the consideration he received for agreeing to defend his title against the Negro rather than against Max Schmeling two years ago . . . If Mike Jacobs hopes to promote a Galento-Louis fight, he must make his peace first with Herman Taylor, the Philadelphia promoter . . . Taylor owns Galento . . . Natie Brown has been guaranteed $3,000 for his bout with Galento at Detroit this week . . . there is no future for such as Hank Luisetti and Chuck Chuckovitz in basketball unless they are offered coaching jobs . . . pro basketball which once paid Nat Holman $10,000 a year is in the doldrums . . . the best pro basketball player in the country can't earn $5,000 a season.

ROOSEVELT

Timekeepers, referees and other officials, forbidden by the District Boxing Commission to officiate at college bouts here, worked the C. U.-Maryland bouts at College Park the other night . . . Evil Eye Finkel is about, proudly brandishing a letter from a Hollywood studio . . . which has advised him it would let him know when his services were needed in a picture . . . Cowboy Scott, the lightweight who was never popular in Washington rings, is an attraction in New England, where he is drawing down big purses . . . Jim Londos is extremely bashful about his age . . . which happens to be 52 . . . his title is disputed by a half-dozen other "champions" but Londos still demands and receives the biggest guarantees of any wrestler extant . . . when he returns to his native Athens, Londos stays in training by rassling his pappy.

The highest-priced pitcher in the country will not be Carl Hubbell, who will get $22,000 in 1939, or Lefty Gomez, who will receive $20,000 . . . he will be that veteran right-hander, F. D. Roosevelt, who drags down $75,000 for one pitch on opening day . . . some enterprising baseball writer will interview the President soon on how the raised stitches of the new ball will effect his fast one . . . Roosevelt's contract to toss out the opening pitch does not expire for two more years and there are reports that he is not thinking of retirement in 1940 . . . he was the undeniable pitching star of the 1938 opener in which the Nats beat the Athletics, 15-12. . . . With the Nats opening their season against the Yankees this year, Griffith Stadium officials anticipate a sellout before April 1.

HENIE

The most expensive set of golf woods now retails for $50 for driver, brassie, spoon and No. 4 wood . . . contrary to the presumptions of crusaders, no "numbers" bets are taken, tabulated or in any way handled at Jimmie's Place . . . certain numbers bookies in Washington who will accept no bets of less than 50 cents, are offering 700 to 1, instead of the 600 to 1 given the penny-and-dime players . . . his friendship with newly elected Gov. Vanderbilt presages the return of Walter O'Hara as president of the Narragansett race track . . . O'Hara, who was ousted during the regime of Gov. Quinn, was a candidate for Governor in the last elections and succeeded in splitting the vote, thus enabling Vanderbilt to win . . . Vanderbilt's first move was to dissolve the three-man Rhode Island Racing Commission and order a one-man commission set up . . . O'Hara's option on the Benning property here does not expire until near the end of this session of Congress.

The Connecticut Avenue ice palace is proving so prosperous its backers have already launched a plan to construct a down-town ice arena with a seating capacity of 6,000 spectators . . . it is their plan to bring the Ice Follies to Washington and enter a team in the Eastern Hockey League . . . Sonja Henie has requested a popular picture magazine to refrain from republishing a picture of her which revealed her legs as too bulky . . . Miss Henie was originally brought to the United States by Hugo Wuist, the enterprising Finn who sponsored the running tour of Paavo Nurmi here . . . Nurmi's tour was so successful that Jimmy Connally, former G. U. star miler, netted $2,500 simply for his job of pacing Nurmi on his record-breaking dashes.

Campbell, Bell Sweepstakes Top Local Tournament Pin Card

The biggest tournament week-end in the history of local men's and women's duckpins confronts Washington's prize-seekers Saturday and Sunday, with a pair of events here and two at Baltimore totaling some $1,500 in prize money.

The oldest and premier men's event in the city, the Howard Campbell sweepstakes, will draw a possible field of 30 for the 15 games here Saturday on three fronts, while the second annual Charlie Bell open handicap sweepstakes will occupy Sunday's card, over the 10-game stretch at Convention Hall.

It'll be the field against Ida Simmons and Lorraine Gulli, as usual, in the eighth annual United States Women's Sweepstakes Saturday at the Spillway and Franklin Centers, Baltimore, at 10 games, while the city's male stars that survived the first 10 games of the Julian Easter-day elimination tournament last Sunday will go back this Sunday for the final 15 games and cash distribution.

The Howard Campbell sweepstakes is hardly recognizable this year to veteran duckpin followers, who are accustomed to watching the event run over three weeks, and limited to Washington city entrants. Due to lack of entries and limited dates on the duckpin calendar, the event has been packed into one day, with the first block at Brookland, second at Lucky Strike and final at Convention Hall.

Virginia and Maryland bowlers are eligible for the first time, and Baltimore, Annapolis, Richmond, Norfolk, Hagerstown and other towns are expected to be represented in the event. George Demeres, Recreation sweepstakes winner and early pace-setter in the Virginia open and U. S. event, will lead the Old Dominion entrants.

Ida Simmons, Norfolk's blonde ace of the women's pin realm, will be after her fifth triumph of the season in the United States Sweepstakes. George Isemann, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Association, looks for a field of at least 50 in the Monumental City event, with $100 first prize guaranteed. The entrance fee is $6.50, and some 15 District and vicinity pinwomen are expected to compete, including Ora Emge and Bronson Quaites.

Miss Simmons has already pocketed first money in the Southeastern, Mary Akers, Chesapeake and Dixie events, and will be in the role of

Columbus Ringmen Open With DeSales; C. U. Meets Duke

McNamara To Complete Team Today

Two Posts Still Open In Explorers Line-up; Meet Toledo Team At Turner's Arena

A majority of the boxers to represent Columbus University in its opening match with DeSales College's ringmen, of Toledo, Ohio, at Turner's Arena tomorrow night, yesterday had been selected by Coach Jim McNamara.

"Buddy" Lazier, lightweight of two seasons ago, moves up to 145 pounds; Dave Schlaifer appears at 155 pounds and Bill Crum is to box at 165 pounds.

Harrisonburg Basketeers Win

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 1.—The Harrisonburg High Blue Streaks, battling for the district championship among the larger schools, had to fight all the second half tonight to conquer McGaheysville High, Rockingham County champions, in an exhibition game. The score was 34 to 28, with the Blue Streaks leading 16 to 5 at the half.

Lefe, rangy McGaheysville guard, was the high scorer with 13 points. Humphries and Parkins each scored 8 points for Harrisonburg.

Rockingham Cage League OpensPlay

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 1.—The Rockingham County Basketball League, getting off to a belated start, will open its season tomorrow night and the seven teams from as many communities will wind up play March 16. Then the first and second place teams will play for the championship.

Timberville, which won the title last year, is playing in the Shenandoah County League this year and so far is undefeated. Broadway, runner-up for the title a year ago; Mount Clinton, Bridgewater, Singers Glen, Elkton, Linville-Edom and Keezletown compose the circuit.

The first two rounds of games—February 2, Mount Clinton at Broadway, Singers Glen at Bridgewater; February 7, Broadway at Bridgewater, Elkton at Singers Glen, Linville-Edom at Mount Clinton.

Terp Five Leaves On 3-Day Trip

University of Maryland's basketball team, second in the Southern Conference race, left yesterday for a three-day invasion of conference foes, the success of which probably will decide the Terps' chance of gaining a berth in the annual elimination championship tournament.

The first stop for the traveling Terrapins is at Durham, N. C. tonight where they meet Duke in a return game. Tomorrow they face North Carolina and Saturday they conclude their trip with a game against North Carolina State.

Harrisburg Firemen Beat Hershbergers

G. W. High Star Ineligible for Rest of Season

Release of Mid-Term Marks Benches Ed Williams

Alexandria, Feb. 1.—George Washington High School's championship basketball hopes suffered a severe blow with the release of mid-term scholastic reports today, when it was learned that Ed Williams, flashy forward of the varsity five, will be ineligible for the remainder of the season. He will be unable to compete in any sport until a new term starts next September. His loss is also a blow to the G. W. track team, of which he has been a member for the past two years.

One of the seven lettermen from last year's squad, Williams has been one of the most outstanding members of the team, and has started every game played this season. In addition to being a high-scoring offensive performer, he plays a clever floor game, and his ball-handling has been largely responsible for a number of important victories.

Coach Albert Doran said today Williams' place would be taken by Amos Clift, another letterman from last year's five, who has been particularly impressive in the past three games.

Episcopal High School courtmen launch their campaign for State preparatory school honors in the Episcopal gymnasium today when they engage the strong Staunton Military Academy five at 3:30.

To date the Maroons have recorded three victories against two defeats, and on the strength of an upset victory over the University of Virginia freshmen, they are ranked as one of the leading contenders for the State title. Their only defeats were suffered by 1 and 2 point margins, at the hands of Gilman Country School and Eastern High, respectively.

Little Wolfe O'Toole Meet Here Tonight

Winner of Arena Match Promised Bout With Londos

Tommy O'Toole, successor to Danno O'Mahoney as Ireland's favorite wrestler, will meet Chief Little Wolf, the Injin star, in the feature match at Turner's Arena tonight.

O'Toole and Little Wolf have a real incentive for this match, for the winner is promised a shot in the near future at Jim Londos, generally recognized as the world's champion.

O'Toole's lone setback here was given him by Champion Londos, himself, but the Irishman lost little prestige in the defeat because Londos admitted afterward it was the toughest bout he had had here in five years.

Favorite of the fans, O'Toole first rose to prominence here when he won a one-night elimination tournament which qualified him for the match with Londos. His most recent local start saw him beat Bibber McCoy when the latter was disqualified for unnecessary roughness.

Supporting the main attraction will be a semiwindup between Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame All-American fullback, and Nick Campofreda, former Western Maryland backfield star. T

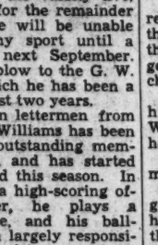
Battle Creek Is Already Amateur Baseball Conscious

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 1.—Do you know that this center of cereals and sanitariums is the new mecca of amateur baseball? With eight inches of snow on the ground, these Michigan health fans are grabbing about the bat and pellet pastime, and I don't mean the major game—despite their being just a lusty fungo drive from Detroit's Brigg's Stadium.



FELLER

And they've got good reason for this off-season chatter. The American Baseball Congress, which includes 28,000 amateur teams, has selected Battle Creek as the ideal city in which to hold the national championships each year.

The Nation's amateur champions have fought it out here for the last two years. And those Battle Creek battles have been so successful that the congress tried to make Bailey Park and Postum Park permanent sites for the Simon Pures' annual title play. But the chamber of Commerce, which underwrites the yearly encounters, cautiously tackled the proposition only for '39, '40 and '41. However, it is generally believed that the championships will become a permanent Battle Creek institution.

C. O. Brown, of Chicago, president of the A. B. C., favors this city of 45,000 as the permanent site for the "Miniature World Series" because it has the facilities to accommodate the Nation's 16 regional champions who have emerged from the 28,000 municipal clubs.

And the experts claim that this city has the best amateur lay-out in America, with its six diamonds at Bailey Park and its grand field at Postum Park. The experts admit that Los Angeles has more diamonds.

Bob Feller, sensational fast-ball pitcher of the Cleveland Indians of the American League, developed out of this baseball congress.

The newest sensation is Joe Gedzius, a shortstop who now is listed as the No. 1 rookie with the Chicago White Sox. Gedzius, who performed in '38 with the Lubbock, Tex., pro team, was with Battle Creek's United Steel and Wire which went to the semifinals of the amateur championships in '37.

Judging from the robust baseball conversation that greets one in Battle Creek, even when the metropolis is quilted with snow, it seems that the city soon will be more noted for its diamond activities than for its cereals and sanitariums.

Robert 'Flash' Gordon Is Anacostia's Hero

18-Year-Old Athlete Has Accounted For School's Name in the Headlines Many Time in Its Brief Two Years

By Bill Burnett.

This is a story about "Flash" Gordon. Not the funny paper hero who spends his off moments worrying huge green lizards to protect an attractive young lady, but a real life "Flash" Gordon. As far as we know, there won't be a single green lizard in this story, and the only girl character is the hero's sister.

The hero is Robert Gordon, the 150-pound, 18-year-old athlete who brought Anacostia High School most of its abundant publicity in its second year as part of Washington's high school family. That some "funnies" reader tagged him "Flash" was as inevitable as a hangover, for most of the male members of Gordon families have been blessed with the nickname since the comic strip artist first thought up his monster-baiting hero.

Yet you have the feeling, upon meeting Bob for the first time, that the fancy sobriquet is somewhat misapplied. He edges into Anacostia's gym office apologetically, murmuring, "ah-'scuse me—did you want me, Mr. Lund?" The words are accompanied with a blush.

Gordon Interviews

Rolland Lund, his football coach, confidante and friend for the past two years, tells him "yes, this fella' wants an interview with you, though I don't know why." Lund and Julian Colangelo, the two members of Anacostia's coaching staff, are great ones for jokes.

First, you try to get Gordon's background. Where'd you learn to play football and basketball, Bob?

"Oh, that. I guess I never did exactly learn any football," young Gordon says, dusting the edge of the desk," except what they taught me at St. Teresa's over on Fourteenth street. This is the first year I ever played basketball, I'm afraid."

"He's a nice kid," Lund says after Gordon is gone.

"You're right there," Lund returns. "That reminds me of the time he was asked to present a baseball bat to the school principal last year. He flatly refused because the presentation was to take place in an assembly, with all eyes turned on him. I pleaded and he finally consented. Well, the first part of the prepared speech was unintelligible, the only part that anyone heard being the last, which was 'well, here's the bat.'"

Colangelo, who has charge of varsity basketball but does his share of rooting for the Indian football team, breaks in at this point with "He may be modest, but anybody seeing him play football would think he was the most forward kid in school. Did he ever gain less than 5 yards on a line plunge? Maybe, once or twice.

"Why, I believe that youngster made the most spectacular run in the interhigh football series last year. Remember? Against Tech. He carried that intercepted pass 40 yards—and off-balance all the way—to give us a 13-6 triumph. And don't think he's modest on the basketball floor, either. You can't be shy and take the ball off the backboard like he does."

What about the future? Gordon graduates this year, what college will he attend?

Had College Offer

This is the province of Lund, who has promised his star athlete a chance at more football and a better education. "One local college," Lund says, "has already made an offer, but I'll have to think it over." Bob and his younger sister are both working in the school cafeteria.

"Both of them have had a tough time staying in school, but they've managed admirably. The question is, will Gordon's parents want him to get a job after graduation. If they do, that kills the college idea. I hope they won't, though.

"Bob wants to study law, and I think any kid who plays football like he does ought to be allowed to study anything he wanted. You can bet that when he goes to a college, and I'm sure he will, he'll be no "Flash-in-the-pan."

Fork Union Beats Woodberry, 23-20

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 1.—Two last-minute goals by McElwee gave Fork Union Military Academy a 23-20 decision over Woodberry Forest here today and moved the Fluvana Cadets' winning streak to 11 straight. With but a minute and a half left to play Woodberry was out in front, 20-19, and three times before the final whistle worked the ball in nicely only to miss shots which would have pulled the game out of the fire.

The fast-moving McElwee headed the Cadets' offense with 13 points, while Covington, of Woodberry, took runner-up honors with 8.

The score at half time stood 14-8 in favor of the home team.

Cards Seek Second Win Of Season

Martinez Out for Initial Triumph After Three Losses; Blue Devils at C. U.

Nestor Martinez, Catholic University's slugging southpaw, is finding the 135-pound class a tough obstacle in his quest for his first victory of the new season.

Reports from Duke, C. U.'s opponent at the Brookland gym Saturday night, indicate the "Silent Senor" will meet another formidable foe when he tackles the veteran Chuck Kasik, of the Blue Devils' squad.

Kasik whipped Benny Alperstein, two-time intercollegiate champion, in the Duke-Maryland meet a few weeks ago and while the decision was a hotly disputed one, Chuck gave Benny quite a battle.

The outlook hardly looks rosy for Martinez when it is recalled that he was stopped by Alperstein in the second round of their bout at Maryland last week. However, Alperstein has generously offered to coach Nestor on how to beat Kasik. According to Benny, Martinez can beat Kasik by employing a good left uppercut.

Coach LaFond is striving to prevent overconfidence in his boys because of Duke's two defeats this year by Maryland and North Carolina. Lenny Bartone, C. U.'s novice 127-pounder who pulled a pleasant surprise by whipping Maryland's Bob Bradley, is at top form and is punching harder than ever.

Jackets' Rally Wins in Overtime

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 1.—Trailing 14 points, 24-10, at the end of the third period, R. M. A. Yellow Jackets staged an offensive rally in the fourth period here this afternoon to tie the score with Fishburne Military School, 27-27, and won in an extra 3-minute period, 33-31.

The Yellow Jackets were off in shooting for three periods but both teams played strong defensive games, reaching an offensive climax in the final period.

For the Yellow Jackets, Dees and Conrad lead the scoring with 11 and 10 points, respectively. Carter scored 10 for the visitors.

Henry Cotton's Attitude Hit By Sarazen

GENE SARAZEN

By the Associated Press.

Port Richey, Fla., Feb. 1.—Stocky Gene Sarazen broke a period of unwonted quiet today by charging poor sportsmanship and undue devotion to the dollar to British golf pros in general and Henry Cotton in particular.

The swarthy gentleman farmer from Brookfield Center, Conn., has been doing without his beloved pop-offs for quite a spell, but he was aroused to old time oral form by by reports Cotton and other Britons were demanding guarantees to come to the United States to play.

In fact, he was so irate he declared he was "going to St. Andrews this summer and bring back that bally cup." Gene referred to the British Open Championship trophy which he won once before.

"What's wrong with this British chap Cotton," asked Gene, "that he claims to be the world's best golfer, in the money now, but demands a guarantee to come over here for some matches in this country?

"He and the rest of the English pros seem to forget that for years on end the leading American pros, such as Walter Hagen, Tommy Armour and myself, and of course the great amateur Bobby Jones, made annual trips to St. Andrews to make the British Open championship a real event.

"Did we hesitate or ask for guarantee? No.

"The American golf professional has contributed more to the development of the game throughout the world than any others.

"Now would be the time for the British to show some good sportsmanship. Let Cotton and his friends come over here and win some honor

Record Crowd Expected for V. P. I. Fights

Carolina Ringmen May Draw 3,500 To Blacksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 1.—Virginia Tech athletic authorities expect the largest crowd that ever witnessed an indoor athletic event at Blacksburg to be on hand for the Tech-University of North Carolina boxing meet Saturday. The series of 16 fast bouts between rival freshman and varsity boxers will commence at 7 p. m. The varsity bouts will start about 8:15.

Athletic Director W. L. Younger has installed an additional 1,000 seats on the south section of the gymnasium floor, thus increasing the seating capacity to 3,500.

The matches promise to be the feature attraction of the most ambitious indoor sports program ever attempted at Virginia Tech. The Rotarians of Blacksburg and Christiansburg, who have annually entertained the varsity football squad and athletic staff at a banquet the past seven years, will be guests of the Tech Athletic Association at the bouts.

The Tech varsity boxing team, coached by Tom Slusser, former Penn State star, is declared by local athletic authorities to be the best that ever represented Tech since the sport was inaugurated here in 1925. The Gobblers, who lost to Virginia by a narrow margin and walloped N. C. State, will be pitted against an able Carolina team headed by Winstead and Gennett.

Pasteurized Wins by Neck in 1939 Debut at Hialeah Park

1-2 Favorite Barely Beats Out Bar Fly

8,000 Watch Meade Score With Colt in First Appearance Since Belmont Stakes

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 1 (AP).—W. Plunket Stewart's Pasteurized, a big, eye-filling son of Milkman, made his first start since beating Dauber a neck in the rich Belmont Stakes and emerged a driving victor in the Grade "A" Handicap that topped the card here today. The chestnut colt, a 1-to-2 favorite over three rivals in the 7-furlong test, responded to Don Meade's whiplashing and held a neck advantage over E. R. Bradley's Bar Fly.

Townsend B. Martin's Cravat was third, two lengths away and a half length before Mrs. Payne Whitney's Armor Bearer. Pasteurized, one of the chief candidates for the Widener Challenge Cup, ran the 7 furlongs in 1:23 2-5.

With a threat of rain in the air and young Jack Horning's new Gulfstream Park track holding its big opening at Hallandale, not so many miles up the line, attendance and betting marks were below normal. Of course, the wagering figures for this meeting have been running under last season by approximately 4 per cent. It was estimated after the feature event that close to 8,000 fans were on hand today.

Pasteurized, only Widener Cup candidate in the headline attraction, carried 122 pounds, conceding weight to his field. Cravat and Armor Bearer, originally eligible for the Widener, were declared out since the first line of nominations was completed. It is understood that Cravat later will be shipped to the West Coast for the rich Santa Anita Handicap. Col. Bradley did not nominate a horse for the Widener.

Pasteurized, a splendid-looking animal as he trotted out on the track, doubtlessly will improve with this effort under his belt. He did not win as easily as expected, however, the lightly weighted Bar Fly proving a real threat in the stretch until Don Meade sensed the danger and shook the favorite with the whip.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DRURY LANE, $14.70, $10.10, $6.40; FRIAR'S SCOUT, $46.40, $20.60; ANNIE ALONE, $4.70.

DRURY LANE found her stride quickly, displayed good speed and took a short lead in the run out of the chute and held on tenaciously under a vigorous hand ride when the real test came to outlast FRIAR'S SCOUT. The latter moved farwardly with a rush in the opening furlong and continued gamely in the stretch run. ANNIE ALONE broke well, but bore in in the early stages and Robertson had to straighten her out several times. But for that she may have finished closer up. BLUE COVERT, a forward factor all the way, held on well in the final drive. MADAM CAPET raced evenly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:37. Winner, A. H. Waterman's b. f. (4), by Crack Brigade—Mary On. Trained by T. J. Tault, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARY SCHULTZ, $16.20, $7.60, $5.10; FRANCO SAXON, $4.20, $3.10; CHALOTAUR, $7.50.

MARY SCHULTZ found her stride quickly, assumed command in the opening sixteenth mile, set a rapid pace while saving ground and, responding gamely under energetic pressure, held FRANCO SAXON safe in the final drive. FRANCO SAXON, prominent all the way, closed gamely, but was unable to overhaul the winner. CHALOTAUR slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, gained steadily under punishment and outlasted GUILD in the final drive. GUILD, under extreme pressure all the way, held on well at the end.

Daily Double, Drury Lane and Mary Schultz, Paid $91.20.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:03. Off at once. Winner, J. Spencer's b. g. (4), by Lee O. Coltner—Fannie J. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46, 1:10 4-5, 1:23 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEIGHBOR, $6.00, $3.60, $3.00; DRUDGERY, $3.80, $3.40; DETROIT BULL, $4.90.

NEIGHBOR, on the outside and going forwardly the entire trip, closed with determination when placed to a drive and got up in the last strides. DRUDGERY, in close attendance of the pace all the way, made a courageous effort when the final test came, but was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. DETROIT BULL, strongly urged, showed keen speed while saving the most ground, but faltered slightly in the stretch run. GAYSET, well up and saving ground the entire trip, moved up menacingly on the inside entering the stretch, but was timidly ridden in the final furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,250. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:32½. Winner, Woolford Farms' b. c. (4), by Insco—Stitches. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:11 1-5, 1:23 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOE SCHENCK (entry), $3.80, $2.30, $2.20; NO SIR, $6.40, $4.00; ROBERT L. (entry), $2.20.

JOE SCHENCK, going in close pursuit of the leader while racing on the outside, took command when called upon and held NO SIR safe under a light hand ride in the final drive. NO SIR, racing in his best form, gradually bettered his position while circling the field in the final quarter mile and finished with a rush in the last furlong. ROBERT L., on the inside and pinched back a couple of times, was taken to the outside entering the stretch and closed strong. COUNT MORSE set a fast pace while saving ground in the early stages, but weakened badly in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,500. Grade A Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:02½. Winner, Mrs. W. P. Stewart's ch. c. (4), by Milkman—Peake. Trained by G. M. Odom. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:10 4-5, 1:23 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASTEURIZED, $3.00, $2.60, out; BAR FLY, $3.80, out; CRAVAT, out.

PASTEURIZED followed the pace closely under steadying restraint until well straightened into the stretch, took command when called upon, but then attempted to loaf and was under punishment in the last 70 yards to withstand BAR FLY'S challenge. BAR FLY, on the outside and never far from the pacemakers, responded determinedly when placed to pressure and made a game effort, but could not overtake the winner. CRAVAT, going closer up than usual and saving ground in the early stages, came to the outside in the final furlong and closed gamely, wearing ARMOR BEARER down in the last strides.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:32. Winner, Mrs. W. Rosen's b. g. (8), by Harpenden—Minnie B. Trained by W. Rosen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:52 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN X, $14.40, $7.00, $4.40; GOLDFIN, $8.30, $4.30; GRAND JESTER, $3.20.

GOLDEN X, under light restraint in the first half mile, gradually bettered his position rounding the lower turn, stole through on the inside in the final furlong and drew out in the last strides. GOLDFIN worked his way up gradually on the outside, finished gamely to punishment and wore GRAND JESTER down in the final stride.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:02½. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KIEVEX, $7.20, $3.70, $2.50; MICRO, $4.20, $2.70; LOURDES, $2.50.

KIEVEX, well ridden, moved into contention on the outside leaving the backstretch, closed with determination through the stretch and outlasted MICRO in the final drive. MICRO held her opposition safe for speed and, rated in front while saving ground, made a game effort when placed to a drive, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. LOURDES, under stout restraint and saving ground in the early stages, swung around the leaders in the last three furlongs, but only passed tired horses through the stretch. DALMAC faltered in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:31. Off 5:32½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEARY FLOWER, $26.00, $10.60, $6.10; TERPSICHORE, $4.70, $3.60; CHANCE STAR, $6.90.

PRINCE DEREK, outrun in the first half mile, improved his position steadily leaving the backstretch on the outside of the field, moved up to the leader with a rush approaching the furlong pole, swerved in and compelled WEARY FLOWER to pull up, and continued gamely to outlast the latter in the final drive. A claim of foul was lodged and allowed. WEARY FLOWER, far back in the early stages, bettered her position with a rush rounding the lower turn, moved up strongly between the leaders when straightened out into the stretch, but had to take up sharply, and was then taken to the outside to close gamely. TERPSICHORE, quickest to begin, displayed good speed while saving ground, but faltered in the stretch run. CHANCE STAR, under extreme pressure all the way, finished stoutly.

Even the best of them take a header now and then. Megan Taylor, figure skating champion of the world, started going around too fast on her shiney blades and the result was a cut on the thigh. She is shown applying a bandage to the injury, after which she will practice for the London skating championship this week

DuPont Income Climbs in Last 1938 Quarter

14% Over 1937 Period Prices Average Lower Pay Rates Maintained

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 1.—Revenue from sales and other operations of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. was 17 per cent less in 1938 than in 1937, according to Lamont du Pont, president, today in an advance statement taken from his annual report to stockholders to be published in the near future. Marked improvement was recorded in the last quarter, when revenue increased 14 per cent over the last quarter revenue of 1937. Despite lower average sales prices in 1938, Mr. du Pont pointed out that wage rates, generally, had been maintained at the 1937 level.

Included in the statement are various comparisons of 1938 results with those of 1928: "The company's average sales prices," said Mr. du Pont, "are near the low for the ten-year period, about 31 per cent below the 1928 average. They have remained at about the same level for the past six years, despite the substantial increase in the cost of raw materials, wages, taxes, etc.

"The average hourly compensation paid to the company's wage workers in 1938 was about 46 per cent greater than in 1928, and about 72 per cent greater than in 1932.

"The weighted average market price of the principal raw materials consumed by the company, although lower in 1938 than in 1928, increased about 23 per cent from 1932 to 1938.

"Taxes of all kinds paid by the company, expressed in cents per dollar of sales, increased about 77 per cent from 1928 to 1938 and about 112 per cent from the 1932 low.

"At the end of the ten-year period the number of employes had increased approximately 7,700, a gain of about 19 per cent."

Com. Investment Trust

New York, Feb. 1.—The annual report of Commercial Investment Trust Corporation for 1938, released today, shows combined net earnings of $16,172,308, which compare with $21,501,296 combined net earnings for 1937. The combined net earnings are derived from widely diversified operations, including wholesale and retail financing of motor vehicles, household appliances and a variety of industrial equipment; also fidelity and surety bonding, income from investments, and textile factoring.

After dividends on the preference stock, there remained net earnings applicable to the common stock in the amount of $15,766,683, or $4.75 a share. Earnings on the common stock in 1937 were $21,095,055, or $6.36 a share.

F. W. Woolworth & Co.

F. W. Woolworth & Co., chain store operators, reported today a net profit for 1938 of $28,584,944, or $2.95 a share on capital stock outstanding, compared with $33,176,509, or $3.40 a share in 1937. The 1938 net profit included returns from domestic and Canadian subsidiaries of the company after deductions for depreciation, amortization, Federal income taxes, interest, and a foreign exchange loss of $152,948.

Westinghouse Electric

Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and subsidiaries, for the year 1938, today reported consolidated net income of $9,052,773 after charges, equal after dividend requirements on 79,974 shares of 7 per cent cumulative participating ($50 par value) preferred stock to $3.38 a share on the 2,592,155 shares of ($50 par value) common. This compared with net profit of $20,126,408 in 1937, equal under participating provisions to $7.53 a share on the combined shares of preferred and common.

J. P. Morgan & Co. Admit Three New Partners to Firm

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. plans to admit three new partners—one of them only 36 years old—next month, J. Pierpont Morgan, head of the firm, announced tonight, pending approval by the New York Stock Exchange, that the number of partners would be increased to 15 on February 17 by the admission of Henry C. Alexander, 36, I. C. Raymond Atkin, 46, and William A. Mitchell, 46. Mr. Morgan made the announcement personally, saying that the additions to the partnership were "made necessary by death and other causes." The new appointments are the first since January 2, 1932, when there were 20 partners. Commenting on the youth of Alexander, a native of Murfreesboro, Tenn., Mr. Morgan said:

"No, he is not the youngest man ever to be a partner. There have been several others much younger. When I was made a partner, I was only 23¼. I had been working in the office, learning the business for a year then. Both my boys, Henry and Junius, were partners before they were 36."

Other members of the firm said that the appointment of Alexander, whom they described as "a brilliant young lawyer," carried on a tradition of always having attorneys in the partnership. It was in this tradition that the late Dwight Morrow became a partner.

Alexander attended the public schools of Murfreesboro and was graduated in 1923 from Vanderbilt University. He received his law degree two years later from Yale, then entered the law office of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, which admitted him to partnership four years ago. The other two appointees have risen through the ranks of J. P. Morgan & Co., in the last 14 years.

$300,000,000 Notes Of RFC to Be Sold

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that it would sell $300,000,000 worth of Reconstruction Finance Corporation notes to the public. The notes will mature in three years. Other details will be made public next Monday.

No statement was made about the use of the proceeds of the note issue, but it was assumed that the RFC would use the money to repay debts to the Treasury, as in the case of similar offerings last fall.

Steel Stocks Lead Decline In January

Off 13.5 Per Cent; Utilities Hold Well, 1.7 Per Cent Down

New York, Feb. 1.—In the most precipitate decline since March last year the market value of 100 representative common stocks depreciated $1,412,799,000, or 4 per cent in January, according to the monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. Ten months ago the Jelke index had declined $4,132,626,000, or 25.5 per cent, the sharpest reaction to be experienced in seven years. In December, 1938, the 100 stocks advanced 3.8 per cent to $19,030,480, while in the preceding month, the list receded 3.2 per cent to $18,335,087,000.

All component parts of the index recorded declines in the latest month. The downward movement in stocks was most pronounced in the steels, which dropped 13.5 per cent, followed closely by the railroads, which fell 12.3 per cent; the building shares, 11.6 per cent; rail equipments, 11.4 per cent, and mining stocks, 11.0 per cent. The smallest losses were registered by the utilities, which receded but 1.7 per cent, while the food shares decreased 2.8 per cent in value.

Closing Lower in Curtailed Trading But Dullness Is Held a Favorable Omen U. S. Treasury Bonds Hold Firm

New York, Feb. 1.—Irregularly lower prices characterized today's stock market which was one of the dullest of recent weeks, only 581,920 shares changing hands. This was the lowest volume for the big board since last September 22, the day following the hurricane, when a good proportion of New England's communication system was out of order. Technicians took the dullness as a favorable omen for it indicated little pressure to sell after the good gains of the two preceding days. The chart, however, appears to be showing a series of receding tops. The loss of the composite average today measured 0.42 point, with all groups contributing a share and the steels, equipments and rails being particularly vulnerable.

Even the aviation shares moved lower with the general trend. Followers of this group were confused by the rapid succession of events in Washington, following the assertion in Paris that the President has facilitated the sale of our best aviation equipment to foreign countries and has, according to reliable reports, stated that in the event of a European war the frontiers of the United States will be along the Rhine.

Aircraft Shares

The outburst of opposition to such sentiments, expressed in Washington today, may have dampened somewhat the ardor of the speculators in aviation shares but the group is still confident. The Street, while agreeing with those Senators who protested against secret deals secretly arrived at, was generally of the opinion that the President would go along and place this country more or less in a position of a participant in the European military chess game. Even though public opinion here is naturally overwhelmingly behind the Democratic countries of Europe, there is a growing disposition to question the wisdom of day-to-day official actions which tend to commit us in any manner.

It all means dollars to the investors in aviation and other munition enterprises but the offset which may have its influence on the prices of such securities is the great public belief that we should be aware of this type of business. The President himself was of this opinion a little over two years ago, when he warned us against propagandists who would use the plea of keepnig our plants busy by taking war orders.

Followers of the utility shares had their hopes stirred again when Wendell L. Willkie, acknowledged spokesman for the industry, appealed to Congress for a final clarification of policies and practices to be followed by the TVA. The utilities have lost their legal battle before the Supreme Court but are pinning their faith on the growing opposition to Federally-subsidized competition with private industry.

Consolidated Edison was the most active stock in today's trading and was little changed. Leading steels were down around a point and motors gave up fractions. Barely steady were the aviations, led by Curtiss-Wright, North American Aviation, Glenn Martin and Bendix. Anaconda was the most active of the metals, losing ½ point. Johns Manville dropped a point in the building division and American Radiator a good fraction.

New Bond Issues Successes

Listed bonds moved irregularly higher in a dull session today. United States Treasury issues and best grade corporate bonds were well maintained, while attention was concentrated on the large new issues announced by bankers. Low-priced rails and other speculative bonds showed more fractional gains than losses. In the foreign dollar division prices soared, with the exception of Chilean and a few others. Turnover was only $4,994,000.

The new obligations of North American Co. and the City of New York occupied the investment market, but when it appeared that both flotations were outstanding successes bidding for prime issues was resumed. Long term United States Treasury bonds varied in both directions by small fractions, with the more indicative maturities higher. Best grade corporate bonds also were slightly higher, where changed.

Medium-priced railroad bonds were cheerful, although some issues closed fractionally down. Borderline rails and the default issues were uncertain. Alleghany Corporation securities receded, but most of the utility holding bonds improved. Industrial convertibles were irregular, like the equities to which they give access. There was some demand for Western Union issues, while International Telephone bonds dropped. Interboroughs were firm in the local traction section.

German municipal and corporate bonds were in demand on the trend of European events, and some inquiry again appeared for Italian issues. Polish, Serbian and other bonds of eastern Europe, advanced in small trades. The high-grade foreigns of Scandinavian, Belgian, Canadian and Australian origin continued to forge ahead. Chileans remained soft in the Latin-American group because of the earthquake damage, but others were steady to firm.

Wheat Rallies But Market Is Narrow

Sales Pressure Light Strength at Liverpool Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Selling subsided in the wheat pit today and the market regained its balance, scoring fractional net gains at the opening that were well maintained the remainder of the session despite nervous fluctuations.

Trading volume diminished, however, with the bulk of dealings confined to commercial operations and changing of positions by various interests. Firmness was borrowed from Liverpool, which closed ⅝@⅞ higher, due partly to short covering. Selling pressure was light and removal of hedges on wheat and flour business helped to support the market. Failure of the Southwest to receive substantial moisture encouraged some buying although precipitation occurred in many sections of the belt.

Wheat closed ⅛@½ higher than yesterday, May, 69@68⅞; July, 68⅞@68¾; corn, unchanged to ¼ up; May, 50⅝@50¾; July 51⅝@51¾; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher; rye, ¼@¼ higher; lard, 5 to 7 lower.

Eastern Building Assets Set Record

Shareholders of the Eastern Building and Loan Association were told last night at the annual meeting that total resources of the organization had passed the highest mark ever recorded. According to R. Edward Early, secretary, the balance sheet stood at $3,131,000. Eastern Building opened for business in 1889.

All officers and directors were reelected. They are: William N. Payne, jr., president; Clarence F. Donohoe, vice president; R. Edward Early, secretary; William H. Harrison, treasurer and Alfred R. Keir, assistant treasurer. Directors are Walter M. Bastian, T. Earle Bourne, William J. Brewer, Charles A. Carry, Osbourn Owings, J. Chester Pyles and Messrs. Donohoe, Payne and Harrison.

Insurance Leader

A. B. C. Meeting

The American Businessmen's Club held a meeting yesterday at the Hay-Adams House.

Home Building Rate Highest Since 1929

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—This year has started with the greatest activity in residential building since 1929, F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today. In the 37 Eastern States, it was said, total contracts for this type of construction in the first three weeks of the year were $50,095,000, a gain of 112 per cent over the $23,637,000 in the like period of 1938.

"The present upsurge," the report said, "surpasses by 12 per cent the first three-week period of 1937 which previously had been the highest January total since 1929. Present indications, therefore, seem to point to continued expansion in this class of work as the year progresses."

Class I Railroad Operating Net 1.43% Last Year

Class 1 railroads of the United States in 1938 had a net railway operating income of $372,846,314, or a return of 1.43 per cent on their property investment, according to reports to the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads made public yesterday.

In 1937 their net railway operating income was $590,203,896 or 2.27 per cent on their property investment, and in 1930 their net railway operating income was $868,719,483 or 3.36 per cent on property investment.

Electric Production Lower Last Year

Preliminary estimates by the Federal Power Commission indicated yesterday that 1938 production of electric energy totaled 115,825,000,000 kilowatt hours, or about 4 per cent less than in 1937.

About 112,735,000,000 of this, the report said, was for public use, compared with 117,742,000,000 the year before. The remaining 3,090,000,000 was produced by electric railroads, electric railways and other miscellaneous plants.

Cotton Futures Close Higher

With nearby positions leading the contract list moved up for closing gains of 1 to 6 points. Trade buying earlier took up a slack left by professional liquidation.

The market's general somnolent appearance was attributed by traders to the apparent confusion in Washington over what some called "a multitude of plans" for dealing with the difficult problems facing the cotton industry.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures slanted downward today. Steadiness of cotton, grains and crude oil acted as a brake on aggressive selling but buyers were wary in face of lower hard prices and lack of improvement in demand for cash oil.

Savings Bank Deposits Rise To New Peaks

Assets and Number of Depositors Also at Record Heights

New York, Feb. 1.—New Record figures for assets, deposits and number of depositors were announced today by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, representing about one-fifth of all American bank deposits.

"The fact that mutual savings accounts were so well maintained in a difficult year provides a basis for confidence in the year ahead," said Henry R. Kinsey, president of the association. "No indicator reflects public welfare more accurately than its savings accounts and the fact that millions of citizens find even a small surplus to put aside shows the public will toward thrift. We do not look for any large increase of savings, but every sign points to a continued steady trend."

On December 31 total deposits in mutual savings banks, which operate in 17 States, amounted to $10,235,431,452, an increase for the year of $109,050,300. This was the top figure for mutual institutions in more than a century of operation. The three leading States were New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

15,156,553 Accounts

On the same date accounts numbered 15,156,553, a gain of 578,367 for the year. These figures included all classes of deposits. In this case leading States were New York, Massachusetts and Washington. Assets on December 31 reached the new high mark of $11,571,017,036, the gain for 1938 being $70,392,732. New York led, followed by Pennsylvania and Washington.

The ten largest mutual savings banks are all in New York City, except one in Philadelphia. They are:

defending champion in this affair. Mamie MacDonnell, Thomastown, Conn., who finished third last year and is the only woman bowling alley manager in the country, will lead the Northern contingent.

Wooten Young, President of the Convention Hall Bowling Alleys, has personally boosted the pot in the second annual Charley Bell Open Handicap Sweepstakes $100, and a first prize of $150 is guaranteed. A new champion will be crowned as "Monk" Walker, defending title-holder, will be unable to compete.

Isemann anticipates a field of 85 for the ten-game tourney, open to bowlers of 126 average or less, with one-half handicap awarded, up to 100 pins. Bill Krauss is the only bowler in the city to sport a 126 average. The entrance fee is $6.50 and the blocks start at 3 and 8 p. m.

Frank Mischou stands the best chance of District entrants in the final block of the Easterday elimination event at New Highland Alleys in Baltimore, as the Takoma pinman is in fifth place in the remaining field of 53. Host city stars dominated the four leading positions at the end of ten games. First prize is set at $200, with $500 in prizes to be distributed.

Galt Davis and his Rosslyn women's team will leave on their 15-day Southern trek Monday afternoon, while Isemann has carded additional engagements at Harrisburg, Va., Tampa and Miami for the five girls, Ida Simmons, Blanche Wootton, Lucy Rose, Rena Levy and Caroline Hiser, who were undefeated last year. George Isemann and Hugh Arbaugh will also make the trip.

Perce Wolfe, defending champion, will lead a large District representation in the ninth annual Calvert Eastern Sweepstakes, Saturday, February 18 in Willimantic, Conn. The entrance fee will be $25 for the 15-game event, and the prize list is expected to hit the $2,000 mark. Calvert has boosted the prizes $100, and awarded a trophy to the winner. Washington has had a monopoly on the event the past three years, with Ed Blakeney and Hokie Smith joining Wolfe as champions, while Brad Mandley won the first running in 1931.

Colored Card Players to Aid Serum 'Bank'

St. Valentine's Day Party Arranged for Hospital Benefit

Joining hundreds of others in their plans for a city-wide card party on St. Valentine's Day—or during St. Valentine's week—for the benefit of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital, is a group of the community's leading colored bridge players.

With C. E. Barron as chairman, a committee has been announced to arrange details of a party to be held Tuesday evening, February 14, at the Twelfth street branch of the Washington Y. M. C. A.

The committee follows: Mrs. B. M. Adams, Mrs. C. E. Barron, Mrs. M. R. Burke, Miss Caroline C. Calloway, Mrs. J. W. Crusor, Mrs. Henry W. Freeman, Mrs. Justine Greene, Mrs. Essie Jackson, Mrs. Edna S. Browne, Mrs. Jabez Lee, Mrs. B. N. McDuffie, Mrs. Virginia McGuire, Mrs. Benjamin E. Mays, Mrs. Kelly Miller, Mrs. Narka Lee Rayford, Mrs. William A. Reid, Mrs. Josephine Smith, Miss Lillian Wickes, Leon Alexander, James A. Cobb, John W. Cromwell, Percy Hamilton, Dr. William J. Howard, Dr. Robert B. Pearson, Kermit D. Ross and Duke Slaughter.

Tickets for parties in hotels, clubs and private homes are for sale at The Washington Post, at $1 each. Mailed orders, with cash, money order or check inclosed, will be filled immediately.

Every dollar received will be used—with no expenses whatever deducted—for the establishment of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

Maj. Sturgis First Casualty In War Games

Hyattsville Man's Leg Broken in 'Landing Force Exercise'

Reports received at Marine Corps headquarters yesterday reveal that Maj. Galen M. Sturgis, U. S. M. C., of Hyattsville, Md., suffered a broken leg in "war games" underway in the Caribbean Sea involving the fleet marine force and the Atlantic Squadron.

MAJ. STURGIS

The injury to the officer, it was said, was the first casualty of the Navy's annual maneuvers, soon to be broadened to involve the greater part of the fleet. It was said Maj. Sturgis fractured his ankle bone while attempting a "landing force exercise," a difficult maneuver in which Marines are landed on a "hostile" shore in heavy seas from small boats.

A similar injury occurred to an enlisted man from the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, Va., but the report did not give the man's name. Both casualties were taken by airplane from the island of Culebra, near Puerto Rico, where the maneuvers are being held, to the Naval Hospital at Guantanamo, Cuba.

Maj. Sturgis, regularly stationed with the fleet marine force at Quantico, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Sturgis, of 15 Avon avenue, Hyattsville.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Kirsten Flagstad sings with the Philadelphia Orchestra, under the direction of Eugene Ormandy, Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Beethoven-Wagner program: Overture to "Egmont," Symphony No. 7, Scena and Aria, "Ah, Perfido," Overture to "Die Meistersinger," "Einsam in trueben Tagen" from "Lohengrin," "Du bist der Lenz" from "Die Walkuere," Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde."

A crowded house paid tribute to Kirsten Flagstad last evening when the Philadelphia Orchestra played its third concert of the season in Constitution Hall, and, with due respect to the virtuoso band of musicians, it was quite obvious that the center of attraction was the Norwegian soprano. No one could find fault with that concentration, for the occasion had been arranged for that very purpose; even the program had been built in perspectives leading to the pinnacles of song.

Every whit of the applausive homage tendered Mme. Flagstad was fully deserved, for she is one of the regnant sopranos of this generation. Not only in her splendid endowment of voice but also in her serene poise she embodies the authority of song. Her singing has that deceptive appearance of effortless power which is the distinguishing characteristic of consummate artistry; her strength resides in her utter simplicity and in her reliance upon th jure principles of musical expression.

Not a trace of artificiality marred the dramatic eloquence of her reading of Beethoven's scena and aria, "Ah, Perfido," and the poignancy of emotion never left the plane of dignity. In her treatment of the Wagnerian arias, there was a subtle differentiation in style which marked the change from one impersonation to another. The Elsa of "Einsam in trueben Tagen" was as unmistakable in lineaments as the Sieglinde of "Du bist der Lenz" and the Isolde of "Mild und leise," yet these distinctions in personality were effected without the slightest trick of histrionism.

Eugene Ormandy prepared the way for these vocal climaxes with selections which the orchestra must know by heart: the overture to "Egmont," the A major symphony, and the vorspiel to "Die Meistersinger." The performances of these works were in the richly vestured manner to which the Philadelphians have accustomed us.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 1.—The stock market maintained a firm tendency today with the bulk of business transacted in the investment and industrial groups. British funds advanced steadily and tobacco, brewery and electrical issues also were favored. Domestic rails remained firm despite poor traffic returns and oils and metals held steady. Transatlantics lost fractions to 2 points and foreign bonds were mixed.

Paris—All sections of the bourse closed firm today with trading less active. Rentes gained 75 to 275 centimes and Bank of France was up about 150 francs. Suez Canal advanced 430 francs while Royal Dutch was slightly higher.

Liverpool—Scattered trade support lifted cotton futures 2 to 5 points today. In earlier dealings, Bombay liquidation tended to offset the advance. Short covering and outside buying disclosed light offerings in wheat futures and the market finished ½ to ¾d higher. Increased offerings of American wheat were attracted at extreme highs, however.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Luck and skill vie for honors in bridge playing, and sometimes the two so intermingle that it is hard to determine where one starts and the other leaves off.

An ugly monster of a hand dealt at the Regency Club's weekly duplicate tournament became the battle ground for this unending struggle, providing the opportunity for an inspirational bid—a bid which only one player was so fortunate and so clairvoyant to make. Count Pecci Blunt, a contract enthusiast who divides his time between the Continent and New York, was the player.

Mrs. T. Charles Farrelly and Mrs. Morton L. Schwartz were the luckless but admiring adversaries who received a bottom on the board because of the count's brilliant bid. But for Mrs. Schwartz and her partner the sting was softened, as Count Blunt's partner was Mrs. Schwartz's sister, Mrs. Edward P. Botsford, and it was through her understanding of her partner's bid that the count's clever coup was carried through to a successful conclusion.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
2 NT.	3 ♣	3 ♠	5 ♣
Dbl.	5 ◇	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♣

The bidding is shown along with the hand in today's box. After Mrs. Schwartz's opening of two no trump Count Pecci Blunt, holding the extraordinary red two-suiter, leaped to three clubs. His purpose was threefold; he hoped to coax a double so that he would be allowed to play the hand at hearts or diamonds; he hoped to encourage a no-trump contract which might conceivably be defeated by his long diamond suit; he hoped to establish some sort of a defense if West bid spades, which was actually what developed.

Mrs. Farrelly finally bought the contract at five spades. Mrs. Botsford opened a club, the count ruffed, played his ace and king of diamonds and led a third round, but Mrs. Farrelly went in with her king of trumps, holding the set to one trick. Had the count first bid diamonds instead of clubs his partner undoubtedly would have led a diamond and the contract would have been made easily.

Most of the other North-South pairs sacrificed at hearts and were set. At one table East opened the bidding with a club, and South jumped in with a psychic spade. West doubled, North rescued with clubs, South retreated to hearts, and North and South were delighted when East and West took up the bidding again and stopped at two no trump.

East made five no trump, which cannot be defeated, but the score sheet was disillusioning to North and South, who learned that most other pairs were allowed to play the hand at a heart sacrifice, which resulted in a smaller loss.

High for East and West was scored by the backgammon expert, Mary Zeta Jacoby, who, partnered with Stuart Scheftel, was allowed to buy the contract for four spades and made five.

It would be interesting to know how Mr. Richard would estimate the luck-vs.-skill feature of this hand.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

"PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT announced today that, upon the advice and with the approval of a majority of the Civil Service Commission, he had modified Executive Order No. 7916, of June 24, 1938 . . ."

The words, "majority of the Civil Service Commission," meant exactly that. There was a dissenting member whose identity is easy to guess. We suspect him to be Samuel H. Ordway, who bore the heavy share of drafting the June 24 Executive orders and who wanted them to serve the long ends of the merit system as fully as possible and as quickly as possible.

The orders, effective today in somewhat minimized shape, won't bring an immediate millenium, for a long time will be required in tarnalating the benefits called for into actuality. Furthermore, the orders could not have designated more busy men for the task of making "a thorough study" . . . "of the best ways of applying civil service principles to the professional, scientific and certain administrative and other technical positions in Government service." Scan the list of them and then determine for yourself just how much time they have, from the considerations of their pressing duties, to study the involvements of civil service.

Dr. Robert Marshall, that personally quiet but much-talked-of young man—who once spent a winter with the Eskimos around the Arctic Circle to emerge with a best seller for his pains and chilblains—will give an illustrated talk next Tuesday night at 8 in the South Agriculture Auditorium. It's free, but worth a price.

MARSHALL

Dr. Marshall will talk and present colored movies of five National Forest Wilderness areas. The pictures were taken by him while traveling through the North Absaroka Wilderness, Wyoming; the Superior Wilderness in the lake country of northern Minnesota; the San Juan Wilderness in the 14,000-foot peaks of Colorado, and elsewhere.

He loves the wilderness, the primitive wilderness, beyond all understanding. It is amazing how the Government keeps him in Washington at all. He is chief of the division of recreation and lands, Forest Service, and as such has charge of more recreational territory than perhaps any fellow in the world. And if the Government was looking for a man who would be sold, stock, lock and barrel, on his occupation, the man was found in Dr. Marshall.

UNCERTAINTY has arisen over how the clerical positions in FBI will stand under the latest executive order postponing the blanketing in of specialized fields . . . Representative Randolph crashes through with another batch of employe legislation, among which is a measure that would affect watchmen in the National Zoological Park. They would be known as the National Zoological Park Police under terms of H. R. 3527, and get the same pay scale as the Metropolitan Police of the District . . .

COMPETITION was felt yesterday in Government agencies generally by those who want their offices to make a fine showing in the plan to aid Washington children through the Blood and Serum Bank. At a meeting Tuesday night, the Federal Bridge League gave each member a bulletin on the bridge parties that will help support the life-giving banks. The members will give these bulletins to their chief clerks, who will be asked to pass word of the parties down the line and bring out as many persons as possible from each agency. The agencies are vying with one another to see which is the most helpful in the cause for the children. M. E. Myers, of the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, is a leader in the campaign.

MYERS

Bob Burns Says—

Some day mebbe I'll learn it ain't no use tryin' to argue with a lady. Especially if she's a lady automobile driver. I'm a motorin' home from the studio the other night in one of our delightful California mists, when I'm hit amidships by a car that comes sailin' out of a side street. The crash felt like it loosened a couple of teeth I should have had pulled several years ago. An' when I could collect what's left of my senses, who do I see but a woman driver, glarin' at me!

"Why didn't you look where you was agoin'?" she wants to know. "Why did you go where you wasn't lookin'?" says I. "It probably don't mean nothin' that I had the right of way. But, besides that, I ain't feelin' so hot. I just come from the doctor's an' he's given me this bottle of medicine for my nerves." "Here—let's see it!" she says, takin' it from me. "Why, what you kickin' about?" she goes on. "You should be thankin' me for helpin' you!" "Helpin' me?" says I. "Why, Madam, you gave me the worst shakin' up of my life!" "That may be!" she comes back. "But that's just what you been a-needin'! See what it says on this bottle—'shake well before usin'!'"

A Game of In-and-Out

Life's a game that, win or lose,
Must be played; you cannot choose.
—Old Mother Nature.

Too late Peter Rabbit remembered. He had thought of only one enemy dressed in white, and so difficult to see at any distance against the snow. That one was Shadow the Weasel, who, with the changing of his coat from brown to white, also changes his name to Ermine. Peter had forgotten Whitey the Snowy Owl. Yes, sir, he had forgotten all about Whitey.

I suppose it was careless of Peter to forget, but I think he was excusable. You see, Whitey belongs in the Far North, the land of snow and ice. That is why he was given that coat of white by Old Mother Nature. She fully understood how difficult it would be for one who must hunt for his living to get enough to keep him alive if he was forced to wear a dark coat when everything about him was white. So he had been given a white coat. As a rule it isn't wholly white. Get close to him and you are likely to discover that it has many small dark brown spots. Mrs. Whitey's coat is more spotted than his, but at a distance both seem to be all white. Now and then one of the family is all white.

Now Peter was running and dodging for his life as he had often done since he started out for himself in the Great World. Peter's life is largely made up of running and dodging, so this was no new experience. But if it wasn't new it was terrifying. This big broad-winged visitor with the big fierce yellow eyes was amazingly quick in turning and swooping. Peter was having all he could do to escape those soft swift swoops and he knew that he couldn't keep it up. Sooner or later he wouldn't dodge quickly enough. That would be the end. Never again would he see dear old Briar-patch.

Now Peter had been so busy dodging that he had had no chance to even look about him for a possible shelter or to plan a way of escape. At last as he dodged he found himself close to the wire fence that surrounded the young apple orchard he had planned to visit. That fence was of woven wire with very large mesh, for it was intended to keep out only Lightfoot the Deer and his family. Peter could slip through one of those openings. He did. It was close to a corner post.

Peter crouched in that corner with his back to the post. He had a moment's breathing spell. Whitey had alighted on the snow just outside and was glaring in at him. They were very unpleasant, those fierce, hungry, glaring eyes. Whitey reached between the wires with a feathered leg and foot trying to reach Peter. He couldn't. He flew up on top of the post. Then he dropped down inside. Because of the angle made by the two sides of the fence he couldn't use his wings to advantage. Peter slipped back outside. Whitey flew up and over the fence, but Peter was back inside.

Whitey snapped his bill angrily, as Owls do, and it seemed as if those yellow eyes of his grew more fierce. Do you wonder? Consider that he was half starved and there was a dinner just out of reach. Peter shivered every time he looked at those eyes. As for Peter, he was still a badly frightened Rabbit, but he was smart enough to stay right in that corner. He had discovered that as long as he could slip in and out through that fence he was safe. He had made the discovery quite by accident, but he was smart enough to make the most of it.

So Peter and Whitey the Snow Owl played a game in-and-out. Peter for his life and Whitey for a dinner.

Phone Temple 3767
Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 1400.

The annual election of officers of the Alexandria Young Democrats Club will be held tonight from 7 to 9, in Gadsby's Tavern. A business meeting will follow.

The last regular meeting of the group selected the following slate for the election tonight: For president, Daniel R. Stansbury and Walter I. Young; first vice president, Mary C. Carne and Carroll H. May, jr.; second vice president, Harriet S. Goods and Evelyn Howard Sheridan; third vice president, Edward W. Alfriend 4th and Elizabeth F. Schneider; fourth vice president, Vincent Bradley and Aubrey Phair; treasurer, Frederick Rawlings; recording secretary, Anna C. Stump; corresponding secretary, Marguerite V. Moncure; sergeant at arms, Eugene Bode, jr., and parliamentarian, Franklin P. Backus and Clyde B. Lanham.

The executive committee, consisting of one man and one woman from each ward, will be elected by caucus of the members of each ward.

Clyde C. Lamond, retiring president, will conduct the meeting.

Other officers who will take office tonight are Joseph B. Ewald, senior vice commander; H. M. Wilson, junior vice commander; Charles B. Emmons, adjutant; John E. Griesemer, quartermaster; W. H. Thomas, officer of the day; T. A. Ash, officer of the guard; H. G. Oliver, chaplain; William M. King, historian; E. C. Davison, patriotic instructor; William K. Nash, color sergeant, and trustees for one, two and three years, respectively, William M King, Charles B. Emmons and Richard T. Davis, all past commanders of the camp.

Invited to Celebration

James H. Bettis, chairman of the invitation committee for the George Washington Birthday celebration under auspices of Russell Mitchell Post No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has sent invitations to the Secretary of the Navy, the Virginia Senators and Congressmen, the Governor of Virginia, the war-time Governor, Westmoreland Davis, State senators and delegates, all city officials, members of the city council, also local National Guard and Marine Reserve officers.

The heads of all civic, fraternal, labor, patriotic and veterans' organizations, service clubs and auxiliaries in the city are also invited to participate in the celebration.

Theft in Drug Store

Albert Weil, who conducts a drug store at the northwest corner of King and Peyton streets, reported to the police last night that the box placed in his store for the March of Dimes collection has been stolen. Dr. Weil said that about 4 p. m. a customer remarked to his clerk that he had placed a dime in every other box in the city, and might just as well not overlook that one, and that about 6 o'clock the clerk asked him where the box was. He said the box stood on the edge of the soda fountain counter, with a placard behind it obscuring the view of the clerk.

Edmonds Is Chairman

John C. Edmonds is general chairman for the annual ball of Columbia Fire Company No. 4, to be held Saturday, February 11, in the Old Dominion Boat Club house.

Other members of the committee are Billy Padgett, Leslie McMenamin, Charles Cook, Henry Metzger, William H. Wood, Sam Berman, Russell Sutton, Arthur Rector and John W. Tulloch.

Telephone SHepherd 4200.

The board of trustees of the Silver Spring Library Association announced yesterday efforts would be made to have the first and thirteenth precincts of the Thirteenth Election District included in the taxing area to raise library funds.

A budget of $3,940 was approved, of which $2,425 was alloted for salaries and $1,035 for books and magazines. The construction was amended to provide for an increase in the board from seven to nine members and terms extended from two to three years.

Mrs. Gertrude Burket and Victor E. Grotlisch have been renamed trustees and Shirley Workman elected to the board.

Fire House Disapproved

Kensington.—Town council has disapproved a proposal to erect a new volunteer fire department building on a site west of the new boulevard between Baltimore and Warner streets, Mayor L. B. Ernest announced yesterday.

Opposition to selection of this site was voiced by the majority of adjoining property owners at a recent hearing. Mayor Ernest said the town officials would offer the department full co-operation in the selection of other sites within the town limits.

Jacob Miller, 78, Dies

Gaithersburg.—Jacob Miller, 78, retired businessman and lifelong resident of Montgomery County, died of a heart attack at his home yesterday. Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the funeral parlors of Ernest C. Gartner, with burial in Forest Oak Cemetery here.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Carrie E. Miller, and a daughter, Mrs. Beulah Crawford, of Frederick, Md.

Mrs. Archer Asks Divorce

Rockville. — LeRoy Archer, of Bethesda, was sued for absolute divorce in circuit court here by Mrs. Mary Victoria Archer, of Washington. The petition sets forth that the couple were married at Bethesda, June 27, 1936, and have no children. Attorney Thomas M. Anderson, of Rockville, represents the plaintiff.

Rockville. — J. Forest Walker, whose term as treasurer of Montgomery County expires early in May., is scheduled to be made manager of the liquor control board of the county. Ralph H. Chase, of Chevy Chase, has been made manager for the interim, succeeding J. Oscar Foulk. Walker will be succeeded as country treasurer by former County Commission John B. Diamond.

O'Donnell a Deputy

Rockville—Hugh F. O'Donnell, of Silver Spring, has been appointed by Sheriff H. Leslie Carlin a deputy sheriff in place of McCubbin Waters, who resigned to accept a position in the County Treasurer's office. O'Donnell will receive $2,100 a year and an annual expense allowance of $600. He is a member of the board of supervisors of elections for the county.

Caddington Named

Rockville—To succeed F. Bryne Austin, who resigned several weeks ago to become secretary to Representative William D. Byron, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has appointed Ward W. Caddington, of Silver Spring, Democratic member of the Permanent Board of Registry for Montgomery County. He was named to complete the term for which Austin was appointed and which has several months to run. The salary is $2,000 a year.

To Honor Pastor

Takoma Park—Robert Lyon has been named chairman of a reception February 13 in honor of the Rev. Paul Schearrer, in celebration of his tenth anniversary as pastor of the Presbyterian Church here.

The affair will be held at 8 p. m. in the parish hall, Maple and Tulip avenues. Mrs. Fred S. Wilson, president of the Women's Society, and Mrs. Charles R. Mills are assisting Mr. Lyon.

Tucker Fair Dated

Parsons, W. Va., Feb. 1.—The Tucker County Fair this year will be held August 30 and 31 and September 1 and 2. Officers for the year are Earl Corcoran, president; E. L. Moon, vice president; Luther Sturm, secretary, and J. H. Felton, treasurer.

Fairfax Votes Countywide Library System

Court Will Be Asked To Name Trustees; No Funds at Present

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2082-M

The board of supervisors yesterday voted to establish a free county public library system. Circuit Court will be asked to appoint five citizens as trustees. The board voted not to appropriate any funds at this time for library work, but agreed to include $900 in the tentative budget for next year.

This action was taken after John S. Barbour, chairman of the county library committee; R. Walton Moore, and several others appeared in behalf of the system. The six existing community libraries will be the basis of a county-wide system with each library retaining its own organization and management. The system would allow circulation of books among existing libraries and into communities now without library facilities.

Tax Changes Urged

Delegate Francis P. Miller, president of the county chamber of commerce and members of the reassessmen: committee of the trade body appeared with recommendations for the 1940 real estate assessment. Miller declared that because of inequalities in assessments as between rural and suburban areas, the farmer was bearing a disproportionate tax burden and the chamber was attempting to aid county authorities in remedying this condition.

The committee, following a six months' study, recommended the county undertake a real property survey. The survey, it was stated, could be carried out this year as a WPA project.

Commissioner of Revenue James U. Kincheloe indorsed the survey, saying it would save thousands of dollars annually. It is estimated such a survey would cost the county about $4,000.

Night Hearings Refused

The supervisors turned down the proposal of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce to hold public hearings on the proposed county budget at night instead of in daytime. The directors said that, because of their employment, many persons were unable to attend day hearings.

County Treasurer L. M. Coyner reported his office issued 3,766 dog licenses last year with receipts totaling $5,327.25 or $238.75 above 1937. The balance was distributed to:

Clifton, $28.57; Fairfax, $98.60; Falls Church, $122.20; Herndon, $70.04, and Vienna, $54.83. The county received $2,080.41.

No Scale Test Funds

M. S. Hubbard, of the Division of Markets of Virginia, Bureau of Weights and Measures, appeared before the supervisors yesterday urging the testing of all scales and weighing measures in the county. He said 38 per cent of the large and 30 per cent of the small scales in public places were incorrect and asked the supervisors to appropriate $75 for inspection. The supervisors turned down his request.

2 Sentenced for Attack

Two men indicted in the Circuit Court of Fairfax County for robbery and attack with a knife on Dr. R. L. Bardfield, Vienna druggist, last month, were sentenced yesterday to 15 years each in the State Penitentiary by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

The two, Ellis Root Kennon, 31, of Pender, and Ronald Clifford Corrick, 31, of Washington, both entered pleas of guilty.

2 Years for Stealing

Grover Deavers, 21, and Emmett Payne, 21, both of Lorton, were sentenced to two years each in the State Penitentiary yesterday in Circuit Court. They had been indicted for breaking into the store of Frank Reid on Ox road and stealing.

Mary Deavers, mother of Grover Deavers, was found guilty of receiving stolen goods. Imposition of sentence was suspended. Eustace Payne, father of Emmett Payne, was found not guilty of receiving stolen property.

Dodson Appointed

James E. Dodson, 26, of Braddock road, Providence district near Burke, was appointed a member of the county police department by Judge Walter T. McCarthy of circuit court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. Heywood J. Durrer. The appointment was made on recommendation of Sheriff E. P. Kirby.

Church Benefit Today

West Falls Church—A bridge luncheon for benefit of the St. James School Association of St. James Catholic Church will be held today at the home of Mrs. Dan Murphy, near McLean.

Dr. Shorey Buried

Falls Church—Services were held yesterday from Pearson's funeral home for Dr. Edmund C. Shorey, 74, chemist in the United States Department of Agriculture, who died Monday in Emergency Hospital. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery. Dr. Shorey is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Brown, of Falls Church, and a sister and brother in Canada. He was born in Ontario, Canada, the son of a Methodist minister, and was educated in Queen's University, Kingston. He became a citizen of the United States while living in Honolulu in 1900. For the last 14 years he had lived in Falls Church.

DRY MARTINI 71 PROOF

COCKTAIL PRIMER
Q. Why does a bartender shake cocktails?
A. To chill them — but principally to blend the ingredients.
Q. Are cocktails at their best immediately after this blending?
A. By no means! The world's most popular cocktails — the kind served on all fast trains — are blended long before you drink them.
Q. Is this an advantage?
A. Decidedly! Instead of being mixed with a quick shake — ingredients have time to "wed" into smooth, delicious perfection.
Q. How can I get these fine, flavorful cocktails?
A. By asking your dealer today for Heublein's CLUB COCKTAILS . . . ready-mixed in the bottle.
G. F. Heublein & Bro., Hartford, Conn.
● CHOOSE FROM THESE SEVEN VARIETIES

HEUBLEIN'S The CLUB COCKTAILS
2 Cocktails for 25¢
*With adequate shaker-icing — you get 18 drinks from each CLUB COCKTAIL bottle. At current prices, this averages about two drinks for a quarter, or less . . . depending upon variety.
